RED TAPE EXPERT

An East Indian Clerk Who Stumped an English Official.

BEAT HIM AT HIS OWN GAME.

In the Fine Art of Circumlocution Babu Tara Chand Made His Pretentious Auditor General Appear Like a Rank Amateur—A True Story.

The government offices in Whitehall are supposed to use "red tape" pretty freely, but the supply in London is nothing to what it is in India. Let us outline briefly the true history of Babu Tara Chand, late of the subordinate branch of the Indian civil service. The story is true.

Babu Tara Chand was a deputy sub-assistant clerk in the cutcherry of a deputy collector in the Swankibagh district of southern Bengal. The inland postage rate in India at that period was three pies, or about 1 farthing, for letters weighing one tola. One fine day when the officials had concluded the annual or biennial overhaul of the books of the cutcherry it was discovered that by some unheard-of turpitude one stamp of the value of three pies (3 farthings) had been unaccounted for. The stamp could be clearly traced to the desk and control of Babu Tara Chand. Thence it had disappeared.

Babu Tara Chand was not summarily dismissed; neither was he made the target of a criminal prosecution. Instead he received a lengthy letter on blue foolscap paper, pointing out in detail how certain property of her most gracious majesty the queen empress—to wit, one Indian postage stamp of the value of three pies—had been committed to his care on a certain date and that up to the date of writing no adequate explanation had been forthcoming of said postage stamp.

The communication fell upon the luckless Tara Chand like a bolt from the blue. It left but three courses open to him—viz:

- (a) Resign from the service.
- (b) Explain the disappearance of the farthing postage stamp in a manner deemed satisfactory by the auditor.
- (c) Recoup the farthing.

Of these three courses it will be obvious to any person with the shallowest knowledge of the Bengali character that the third one (c) was from the outset beyond the pale of consideration. The first (a) was also too terrible to contemplate. Therefore Babu Tara Chand sat down and composed a letter which was a masterpiece in its way and in which he requested to be relieved from routine service for a period of four weeks to enable him to make such a search among the records of the department, etc., as might enable him to trace the missing stamp. This reasonable request was readily granted.

Four weeks later Babu Tara Chand applied for a further term of two

TOWN COUNCIL

Council Chamber,
Oct. 3rd, 1910.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor T. W. Simpson, presiding.

Present—Reeve Alexander, and Councillors Ming, Osborne, Waller and Kimmerly.

The minutes of the last regular and special sessions were read and confirmed.

Messrs. W. G. Wilson and John Thompson addressed the council in reference to the building of a granolithic walk on the north side of Bridge street, between John and East streets. The gentlemen urged the building of this walk immediately, particularly, as they stated, the walk was in a dangerous condition. The gentlemen were in a position to provide competent men to do the work, if the council would order it done. They were also willing to pay their proportion of the cost of the work immediately upon its completion.

Councillor Steacy entered. In debating the above question the matter of finances, and the location of the proposed walk inside or outside the trees, occupied considerable of the council's attention. Mr. Wilson was not particular whether the walk was built inside or outside the trees, but Mr. Thompson was positive in his desire to have it outside the trees. Mr. Waller, chairman of Streets Committee explained that all the money remaining of the appropriation to his committee was needed for other necessary work this fall, but if the council was of the opinion that the walk should be built, he was prepared to do their bidding. It was finally decided that no action be taken.

A communication was read from C. A. Walters, secretary Napanee Light, Heat and Power Co., asking that the council pass an order for $100, the balance appropriated for expenditure on capital account.

Laid on the table to be dealt with later in the evening.

A communication was read from S. G. Hawley, Toronto, tendering his resignation as councillor for the Town of Napanee. The reasons for his resignation are that he has disposed of his property here and removed his family to Toronto, where they will reside in future.

Laid on the table until next regular meeting of council.

There was only one tender received for the construction of the Dundas street sewer. John W. Litton, of Kingston, offered to do the work according to plans and specifications for the sum of $12,620.

Geo. Wright, the engineer who drafted the plans and specifications, and estimated the cost, in his report to the council in July, said:—"The total estimated cost of the intercepting sewer including all excavations, tile and junctions, and laying of same, back filling and placing the surplus material as road metal on Dundas street, manholes, engineering and inspection is $10,830.84. This estimate is based on the assumption that the town handles the work by day labor under a competent foreman."

Councillor Kimmerly thought in view of the engineer's report the tender of John W. Litton a trifle steep, and moved that the tender be not accepted. The motion was seconded by Councillor Osborne, but was declared lost on the following division:

V KOUBER, Napanee.

With one football death already reported, and a score or more of injuries in Saturday's games, the experts are rapidly reaching the opinion that the game is as dangerous as before the revisionists operated on the rules.

At Chatham, Ont., through the cook unknowingly making gravy with flour in which rough on rats had been mixed Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Stegmann, Mr. and Mrs. Pappas and child, Lindsay, guests, were poisoned, Saturday night. All likely will recover.

to be relieved from routine service for a period of four weeks to enable him to make such a search among the records of the department, etc., as might enable him to trace the missing stamp. This reasonable request was readily granted.

Four weeks later Babu Tara Chand applied for a further term of two weeks wherein to draw up a report upon the results of his investigations in pursuit of the errant postage stamp. This, having passed through the eighteen or nineteen different hands necessary for such an application, was in turn duly granted, and at the end of the fortnight Tara Chand submitted a report of 216 foolscap pages, explaining that, despite the most diligent efforts and inquiries on his part, he had been unable to secure the slightest clew to the cause of the deficiency.

When the department of audits and accounts had fully digested this document and presented a report of the same in official précis to the auditor general the auditor general through the secretary of the assistant auditor general of the presidency of Bengal notified Babu Tara Chand that it was not wholly satisfactory and that the circumstances bearing upon the loss of the stamp would have to be definitely explained and proved or the deficit of three pies would have to be made good.

Babu Tara Chand stuck to his guns and wrote again. He wrote many times. As often as he wrote his explanations the auditor general wrote signifying his official dissatisfaction with the same.

Eventually, one fine day about nine months subsequent to the discovery of the loss and some two years subsequent to its alleged perpetration, the auditor general—his interest in the matter of a farthing postage stamp being overwhelmed in a frontier war budget—sent an ultimatum to Tara Chand. The loss of the postage stamp would have to be definitely explained or its value, the sum of three pies, be duly refunded to the treasurer of the Swankigabb district.

Then Babu Tara Chand became possessed of an inspiration which even to this day is pointed to with pride and complacency by even the most circumlocutory of the red tape departments within the purview of the government of India.

Babu Tara Chand wrote to the auditor general as follows:

Sir—In reply to your memo. of 7th inst. I have the honor to state terrible conflagration of my cook house on 5th inst., hopelessly annihilating all documents in the case of lost postage stamp of three pies, property of her most gracious majesty the queen empress. Therefore by grace of God and under regulation para. 13, 69, section cxxxi, of departmental regulations, volume 87 (Bengal), I request you forward for my information complete copies of entire file of correspondence in this case, so that I can report again upon same to your satisfaction. I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
TARA CHAND,
Deputy Subassistant Clerk to the Deputy Collector, Swankigabb.

The auditor general never replied. Tara Chand had won his case.—London Tit-Bits.

Moved by Councillor Waller, seconded by Councillor Ming, that the tender of John W. Litton be accepted. Declared carried on the following division:

Yeas—Alexander, Ming, Simpson, Waller.—4.

Nays—Kimmerly, Osborne, Steacy—3.

Councillor Waller, chairman of Streets Committee, asked for information as to where the tile, to be used in the sewers being built by the town, should be purchased.

Mayor Simpson answered the question. He stated he had consulted the solicitor and got his opinion on the matter. In the early part of the season the town had advertised and received tenders for supplying material to be used by the corporation in 1910. Mr. M. S. Madole's tender for supplying tile, etc., had been accepted, and it was the opinion of the solicitor that the town was legally bound to buy from Mr. Madole whatever tile they used this year.

The Fire Water and Light Committee reported re the petition referred to them asking for the extension of the waterworks mains north on Centre street, from Mr. Geo. A. Cliff's corner. Upon investigation the committee found that the revenue was not sufficient to warrant the expenditure, as was necessary according to the agreement between the town and the Waterworks Co., and reported no action.

Report adopted.

A by-law was passed empowering the mayor and clerk to execute the contract between John W. Litton, of Kingston, and the Town of Napanee, for the construction of the Dundas street sewer.

The clerk was instructed to draft a by-law fixing the license fee for moving picture shows at $50 per annum.

Moved by Councillor Steacy, that the Electric Light Commissioners be asked to furnish this council with a statement of the amount spent on capital account to date this year. Carried.

On motion the request of the secretary of the Napanee Light, Heat and Power Co. for the balance of appropriation to be expended on capital account was granted.

The following accounts were ordered paid:

M. S. Madole.....	$ 138.80
Wm. Loucks	27.25

Council adjourned.

Physiognomy.

It is impossible to say just when physiognomy began to be a "science." It is said that the celebrated Pythagoras founded the science about B. C. 540. It is spoken of by Hippocrates about B. C. 450, but he does not attempt to go into the discussion of its origin. The first systematic treatise on the subject that has come down to us is that attributed to Aristotle. After deliberating for some hours, and examining many witnesses, the grand jury at the assizes Belleville, returned a true bill against Robert Parker, charging him with murdering William Masters. The accused, when arraigned, through his counsel, E. G. Porter, K. C., M. P., pleaded "not guilty."

While S. Barnhart was taken to the hospital, where the bullet was extracted. The weapon was thought to be unloaded.

Early Tuesday afternoon, an aged man named Samuel Hare, an inmate at the House of Industry, Kingston, fell while walking over some rails, in the railway yards, and suffered severe cuts, on his forehead. He was given medical attention by Dr. Mylke. Mr. Hare was formerly a resident of Tamworth. It is not expected that his injuries will be of a serious nature.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy told the C. P. R. shareholders at the annual meeting in Montreal that the company had assets of about fifty million dollars from land sales and other items, and the question of increasing the return to shareholders would be considered. New steamships on the Atlantic and Pacific were also necessary to accommodate the increasing traffic.

A meeting of the management of the Labor Day demonstrations was held one evening last week at the Stewart House, Deseronto. It was decided to hold the postponed races and games on Thanksgiving day, Oct. 31st. Lively interest was taken in the discussions and an unique part of the proceedings was the President, to keep order, instead of using a gavel he used a cane.

That there will be local option contests in fully one hundred municipalities next January was announced at the meeting of the General Executive of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance held at the Administration Building of the Toronto Exhibition. Already the Alliance is in correspondence with about eighty of the proposed municipalities where contests will be held. Arrangements have been made with Mr. G. W. Morrow, of Detroit, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Michigan; Mr. E. S. Shoemaker of Indianapolis, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Indiana, and Mr. J. H. Roberts, of Montreal, Secretary of the Quebec branch of the Dominion Alliance, to give assistance with the fall's campaign.

TYPHOID TERROR OVER

VACCINATION BY A SERUM KILLS THE GERMS.

British Officer Discovers Serum Which Reduces Death Rate 90 Per Cent.

The typhoid terror is a thing of the past. So declare the medical men of the American army, who have adopted vaccination to wipe out that scourge of nations in peace and war. Inoculation for the disease was first used by the British army, who fought the fierce ravages of cholera in India with the same principle. Its success in cholera led Sir Almoth E. Wright to make a serum for typhoid which he tried on two men who afterwards proved immune. Statistics prove the death rate has been reduced 90 per cent.

FIGURES PROVE SUCCESS.

Then the American army took it up. In the last eighteen months twelve thousand men of Uncle Sam's army have been vaccinated for typhoid fever. Of these twelve thousand, only three men have since been attacked by the dreaded scourge, and these slightly. There has not been a death from the disease in the whole number. In every other block of the army containing twelve thousand men there have been seventy-two cases of typhoid in the same time and seven deaths. In the fifty thousand unvaccinated there have been three hundred cases and thirty deaths.

SECRET OF VACCINATION.

The secret of the vaccination business lies in capturing the germs of the disease, killing them to prevent overactivity, and then placing them in the blood. This arouses the system of the individual and it produces an antitoxin for the disease in question—that is, it produces something to fight that disease.

When one has smallpox or typhoid or any such disease, it ravages the system until that system develops the elements that will counteract it. When these elements are developed the disease is met by an equal or conquering force and is able to make no further headway. The patient is then immune. Vaccination is only a fire alarm to the system and starts it to developing the needed antitoxin in advance.

PROCESS NOT DANGEROUS.

This vaccination is not to be compared in severity with that for smallpox. The patient has entirely recovered within a day. There is some inflammation at the point of inoculation, and this is fully developed within 12 hours. For a day the patient feels as though he were going to have the grippe or cold or some of those milder ailments. He may have a slight chill, headache or suffer slight nausea. This usually lasts only two or three hours and all symptoms disappear within a day. There are never any serious effects of the vaccination. The medical profession of the world has observed in all some eighty thousand vaccinations. In no one of these has there been any injury or fatality. There is nothing whatever to fear in the process.

LITTLE DORRIT'S LAND

HISTORIC LONDON STREET TO BE DEMOLISHED.

Tabard Street is Connected With Every Circumstance of Greatness.

Though there are few folk living—except perhaps its actual denizens—who are not glad that Tabard street should be wiped off the face of the earth as a disgrace to modern civilization, it has to be confessed that hardly a street in London is so famously connected with history, poetry and every circumstance of greatness, says the London Chronicle.

In the old, old days, before the new Dover road wheeled round from the borough into the Kentish highway, Tabard street was called Kent street and was the main approach to London for every one who arrived from anywhere in Kent, from Canterbury, from the Cinque Ports, and so one might almost say from Europe.

Up Tabard street nearly 600 years ago rode the Black Prince, conqueror at Poitiers, bringing with him in triumph the captive French King, a pageant compared with which these twentieth century shows are but half hearted pieces of make believe. Up Tabard street swarmed the peasants of Kent under Wat Tyler and later on Jack Cade and his Kentish men, pouring in from the heart of England's industry, the "Lancashire lads" of that day.

DOWN TABARD STREET

some time before either of these events the Canterbury Pilgrims clattered over the stones on their way to Becket's shrine, laughing, jostling, jingling in the May morning, a bevy of jollity and color.

Yet even in those far off times Tabard street seemed to have made up its mind to prove unworthy of this honor of welcoming the coming and speeding the parting guest. As long ago as the thirteenth century it was a haunt of depravity and poverty. In Shakespeare's time it was shunned by all respectable folk. For centuries it was deplored that distinguished foreigners coming from the Continent should get their first impression of London from Tabard street, and sometimes they used to be hurried through by night so that they should see as little of it as possible.

So on to our own times. The recent resource of changing its old name to something pretty and poetic has had absolutely no effect. Vice and dirt seem to be in its very air, and since the creation of Dover road turned the stream of traffic elsewhere it has just quietly degenerated into from the association of which one fancies the very earth will need to be cleansed.

Yet with it all, the very dingiest—though not the worst—features of Tabard street still have a romance for us of to-day. For their last distinction was that of being touched by the genius of Charles Dickens. Not a hundred yards from Tabard street Little Dorrit was born. At St. George's Church hard by she was married and there too is the vestry porch where the kindly hos-

CURED BY "STARVING"

MUSIC TEACHER'S NEURASTHENIA VANISHED.

She Lives on Diet of Rice and Eggs with Abundance of Hot Water.

Many are the stories one hears of people who have found health through various "starvation" cures. The latest is from a Brooklyn music teacher who cured herself of a bad case of neurasthenia, that bugbear of city people. At the time she started the treatment every nerve in her body was affected, her left arm and hand being so bad that one finger was practically useless.

HER DIET OF RICE AND EGGS.

Her physician advised her to try the "rice and egg" diet, and for six months she followed the schedule faithfully, not even allowing herself a piece of candy. For breakfast she took a quart of hot lemonade (which was in reality nothing but hot water with some lemon and a little cinnamon to take off the insipid taste), and one saucer of rice eaten with very little butter, sugar and nutmeg, or with milk without sugar.

For dinner she had one soft boiled egg, one slice of toasted bread, and a quart of water, not cold. For supper it was a saucer of rice, a piece of toast and either an orange, stewed prunes or baked apple and a quart of water. Just before retiring she drank a quart of the hot lemonade flavored with spice.

BECAUSE DIFFERENT BEING.

She says—"Not one thing, not one drop, other than I have mentioned, passed my lips for five and one-half months. I lost a little in weight, dropping from 134 to 127 pounds, but I never felt better or more active in my life after the first few days, during which I felt the natural craving of habit for 'something more.'

"If between meals I felt hungry I would drink a good portion of water, either hot or cold, but if hot I would usually add the lemon and spice, as being more 'tasty.'

"To say that the diet helped me does not express it. I was a new woman. Instead of feeling fagged and dragged all the time and sleeping poorly, deriving no benefit from my sleep, I had the light and buoyant sensation as if treading on air which comes from perfect circulation and digestion.

"I would like to say that for the last four months I have not had meat of any kind on my table often more than twice a week, and we are all well nourished and up to the mark as regards weight and strength, and with no dyspepsia."

MATRIMONY IN AUSTRALIA.

Australian statisticians have just published the matrimonial figures for last year. The youngest bride was a girl of 13, living in New South Wales, and the oldest was a spinster of 89. Twelve of the brides were only 14, fifty-four were 15, 267 were 16 and after that they ran into the thousands. Nine brides under 21 married men over 50, the bridegroom in two cases being 50.

serious effects of the vaccination. The medical profession of the world has observed in all some eighty thousand vaccinations. In no one of these has there been any injury or fatality. There is nothing whatever to fear in the process.

DOCTORS' BRIGHT HOPES.

The statement is for the first time issued on the authority of the medical corps of the United States army that if every individual in the nation would capture, kill, count and inject into his arm five million typhoid bacilli, there would next year be only one case of the disease where there are now ten. They are willing to stake their reputations on its benefits. The government has prepared vaccine in abundance and will freely furnish it to practitioners in whom it has confidence, men whom it believes will handle it properly and who will agree to report results. It is being scattered broadcast in this way, and soon all the world may come under its beneficent effects.

COSTS MORE TO SLEEP.

Lloyd-George Taxes Make Hotels Raise Prices.

In many of the large cities of Britain, such as Manchester, Birmingham, Glasgow and Cardiff, increased taxation has caused a rise in hotel rates. A traveller at Norwich recently found a footnote added to his bill, reading: "Increased taxation necessitates an extra charge of 2d. (six cents) per room per night." Some other hotels have raised their rates twice that amount and at Glasgow by tacit agreement between the proprietors, tourists and other floating guests are charged anywhere up to half a dollar more for a room, than under the old rates. The commercial travellers are finding it a hardship, as nowadays they do not get all their expenses from the firm they represent, but either work on commission, paying their own expenses, or are paid a lump sum as salary and expenses. In some cases hotel porters and other servants are standing the cost of the increase, as travellers have reduced their tips from a shilling to sixpence.

In Manchester a dozen leading hotels combined to advance their nightly charge for rooms by sixpence, alleging that this repays them only one-third of the increased taxes under the Lloyd-George budget, and although there was some grumbling at first, travellers now generally recognize the justice of the hotels' case.

"ICH DIEN" OR "ICH DYN."

True Spelling and Meaning of Prince of Wales' Motto.

"Ich Dien," we were always taught at school, is German for "I serve." A Bohemian king, who wandered into France six centuries ago, wearing this bandage on his hat, stacked up against Edward the Black Prince at Cressy or Poitiers, and lost his motto, which has been the property of the Prince of Wales ever since. That's what the school histories told us. But now comes a Cambridge scholar, writing to the London Daily News, who says that in the best German dictionaries "Ich Dien" is old Welsh, and in modern Welsh would be "Eich Dyn," meaning "your man." Anyhow, says the Cambridge man, what would the Slavonic King of Bohemia want of a German motto.

—though not the worst—features of Tabard street still have a romance for us of to-day. For their last distinction was that of being touched by the genius of Charles Dickens. Not a hundred yards from Tabard street Little Dorrit was born. At St. George's Church hard by she was married and there too is the vestry jorch where the kindly beadle laid her to sleep with the burial register for pillow.

Even the old Marshalsea, the debtors' prison, where Mr. Dorrit was so distinguished a resident, where Dickens's own father was not unknown and to which Dickens himself paid many a visit as a boy—is still to be traced to a far greater extent than can be imagined. One has only to dive into Angel place—the little court on the left just before one comes to St. George's from London Bridge to find the grim old walls of the Marshalsea standing as they stood a century ago, with here and there an old grated window that still recalls

THOSE TIMES OF TEARS.

Following the old walls round by warehouses and offices flanked by grimy little paved alleys that are probably themselves Dickens survivals, one reaches the Southwark mortuary—a blithe resort by comparison, surrounded by a little garden of old-fashioned flowers. Close by is a battered old door—once an actual door of the old Marshalsea. If one peeps over the wall here from across the alley close by the entrance to the mortuary one may catch a glimpse of the old Marshalsea belfry, still practically just as it was when it rang out locking up time for Little Dorrit and her old father. Coming round into St. George's churchyard one has completely encircled the famous old prison that was the world of Little Dorrit's girlhood.

IRELAND'S POPULATION.

Report of Registrar-General Shows Decrease in 1909.

Last year Ireland decreased in population, the loss by immigration more than wiping out the excess of births over deaths.

The figures, as given in the annual report of the Registrar-General for Ireland for 1909, may be summarized as follows:—

Births	102,759
Deaths	74,973
Excess of births over deaths	27,786
Actual decrease in population	890

In the previous year, despite emigration, the population increased by 1,853.

Birth rate 0.3 per 1,000 above past ten years' average.

Death rate 0.6 per 1,000 below past ten years' average.

Of the 22,650 marriages registered in 1909, 16,057 were between Roman Catholics, 3,427 according to the rites of the Church of Ireland, 2,296 in Presbyterian meeting-houses, 398 in registry offices, and the balance in various registered buildings.

Deaths from tuberculosis decreased by 699 (from 11,293 in 1908 to 10,594 in 1909), and this, following a decrease the previous year of 386, is attributed to the work carried on by the Women's National Health Association, under the Countess of Aberdeen, whom the Registrar-General congratulates on this successful endeavor.

where the Tuscany galleon Florencia is supposed to have been lost, in Tobermory Bay, have led to such important finds during the past fortnight, says London Chronicle, that those in charge of the operations have decided to charter a powerful suction dredge, capable of clearing the area where the majority of the undoubted relics of the Florencia have been found.

Two days before diving ceased there was recovered a fine silver lamp, of Italian pattern, quite close to where a silver candlestick was recovered previously, and where two stone cannon balls were found a few days ago. The recovery of such articles as silver lamps, silver plates and silver candlesticks bears out the story in the Spanish records that there was on board quite a fortune in the way of sacred vessels, silver crucifixes, lamps, and candelabra belonging to the seven priests who sailed in the vessel.

In the list of the treasures carried on the Florencia were included a crown of gold, with many jewels, and the Admiral's sword. The diver not long ago came upon the richly adorned basket-hilt of a sixteenth-century rapier. The quillons of the hilt displayed beautiful filigree work, and on the guard was a Maltese cross, with ball and crown, under which was a monogram, "G. R." The guard is still further ornamented with fine imitations of flowers and other fancy work.

An authority on antiquities at present on holiday at Tobermory, considers that the decorations of the hilt are of gold, and this opinion is strengthened by the fact that the hilt was entirely free from lime incrustations. In the records of the Clan MacLean distinct mention is made of the Admiral's sword being on board the Florencia. The hilt found may or may not be that of the Admiral's sword, but it certainly is that of some grandee, and on the Florencia there were at least two such grandees—Don Garcia Chanez and Don Fernando Bernardino.

The finding of one of the huge tongs-like grapples used by the Swedes for tugging at the planks of the galleon affords the clearest proof of the divers being on the right spot. The Swedes actually saw the vessel, with its charred timbers sticking above the water in places, and tore at its decks in order to reach at the wealth beneath.

GIGANTIC TASK.

What It Means to Supply London With Water.

E. B. Barnard, chairman of the Metropolitan Water Board, in an address on the work of that body at the sanitary inspectors' conference in London, England, said that the population which the board was supplying with water was nearly equal to that of the two kingdoms of Norway and Sweden, about the same as the Dominion of Canada, 2,000,000 more than Australia and New Zealand together and larger than the whole population of Scotland and Wales by about 1,000,000.

If they could build a tank the size of Trafalgar Square (two and a half acres) and the height of Nelson's Column, London would empty such a tank twice in every twenty-four hours. The water mains alone would reach from Liverpool to New York and back again and it would take the Mauretania ten days to race along the whole length.

G" WEAVERS OF SHOTTERY THE WORLD GOING MAD EDISON'S LATEST MARVEL IN MERRY OLD ENGLAND

MISS CLIVE BAYLEY IS DOING A NOBLE WORK.

An Industry Which Gives Employment to the Blind and Deaf and Dumb.

In Shottery, scarce a mile from Stratford-on-Avon, a wise and clever woman has made a corner of peace and sunshine where some of the weak may slip out of the ranks that are marching too fast for their strength—a little space where the grind of competition does not enter, nor the jar and clang of the industries of the great world; a space where the crippled and dumb and blind may develop their powers and quietly grow, sheltered from the oppression of the struggle for bread between weak and strong, says the London Daily Mail.

The old cottage, with its beams dating back to Saxon times, its smart new thatch and lavender bordered garden, is the studio where are shown the products of a factory none of whose workers is fully equipped for life, yet their powers have been so drawn out and developed under the guidance of Miss Clive Bayley, the foundress of the industry, that they not only produce work of artistic value and lay the foundations of future financial independence but may claim, through her instruction, to be pioneers in the

REVIVAL OF A BRITISH ART.

For round the walls of the little cottage hang sumptuous hand woven tapestries; here a proud display of armorial bearings, there a subject picture of great decorative value, and beyond a rug of Eastern design and coloring. On the floor lie strips and fragments of carpet, made after the manner of those which the girls of Tabiz and Kurdistan have knotted with patient fingers through centuries of labor to the accompaniment of monotonous chant and song; on the table lies a figure subject finely woven in silks, beautiful in texture and strange color, the work of the lame girl who met us at the door.

In the neighboring cottage live the weaver girls of Shottery, and strange is the silence of the long room where they bend over their frames. No laughter, none of the light foolish chatter of girlhood rises above the sound of knots and strings. Before one large frame four girls are seated; one is blind, one deaf and dumb, another crippled, and the fourth can neither write nor spell, though she is of full age.

Other girls work singly at smaller strips and panels and as we pass one looks up with unseeing eyes, one or two smile as they see us, but can make no reply to our greeting or questions. In an adjoining room a girl of 16, painfully stunted in growth, sits cheerfully drawing a design for the next large panel the school will undertake and we leave her intent over a branch of may.

And so they work in the sunshine with the wide green country about them, a fortunate few of the many infirm who pass perhaps their whole lives in State institutions, where

ENGLISH RACE DECADENT, SAYS LUNACY EXPERT.

More Insane Persons in the World Than Sane in the Near Future.

According to Dr. Forbes Winslow, who acquired international celebrity by his sedulous insistence on his theory that "Jack the Ripper" was a homicidal maniac, the world is going mad.

Dr. Winslow considers that the rate of progress to that consummation is shockingly rapid. In a book of reminiscences published recently, this expert in criminal lunacy says:

"By a simple arithmetical calculation it can be shown the exact year when there will be more insane persons in the world than sane. We in England are gradually approaching, with the decadence of our youth, near proximity to a nation of madmen.

FIGURES SHOW CURSE.

"By comparing the lunacy statistics of 1869 with those of 1909, four decades having intervened, my reflections are sad indeed. A terrible but real curse is in store, and an insane world looks forward to me with certainty in the not far distant future.

"In 1869, out of a population of 22,223,299, there were 53,177 registered lunatics in England and Wales, there being one lunatic in every 418 of total population, whereas in 1909, out of a population of 35,756,615, the number of registered lunatics was 128,787, making on an average one lunatic in every 278 of population. So that in forty years an enormous increase in lunacy is seen. Surely a dreadful future for nations still unborn to have to cope with.

FACTS SAD, BUT TRUE.

"These are the facts, and, sad to reflect upon. They must be accepted. They cannot in any way be challenged."

Dr. Winslow's phraseology is sometimes unhappy, as when he writes, for instance:

"I have breathed the atmosphere of lunacy for over sixty years, and the conclusions I arrive at are pessimistic in the extreme."

SCENE OF AN OLD MASSACRE.

Relies Uncarried by Capt. Cook's South Sea Expedition.

The exact spot where ten members of Capt. Cook's expedition were massacred by the Maoris 137 years ago has been definitely determined and some interesting relics of the ancient tragedy discovered by Robert McNab in Grass Cove, Queen Charlotte Sound, says the London Standard.

It may perhaps be remembered that on December 17, 1773, the captain of the Adventure sent two officers and eight men across the sound to gather wild greens for the ship's company. They failed to return, and searchers who were sent out finally discovered evidence of a tragedy in a number of baskets containing human flesh and fern root also a hand of a white man.

SOUND AND MOTION CLOSELY JOINED TOGETHER.

Demonstration of the Kinetophone of Moving Pictures That Talk.

At his laboratories in West Orange, New Jersey, Thomas A. Edison before a small group of people the other evening demonstrated his latest wonder—the Kinetophone.

For the first time he showed what he had accomplished along the lines of one of his favorite pursuits; the production of an instrument which would give simultaneously the movements of the human being and the sounds of the same being's voice. He has been working for many years to effect this and he will not say even now that he has achieved all that he hoped for, but he says he has at least made a beginning which looks well, and he believes he will succeed within a year in giving to the public results which will if not surprise at any rate please the public.

PICTURES VIBRATE LESS.

The demonstration opened with an exhibition of moving pictures, but it was to be remarked that the pictures moved with a peculiarly even flow. There was less vibration than is usually to be seen. After this series came the real test of the evening. A big man walked forward on the screen, bowed to the audience, and began to speak. As soon as he opened his mouth the sounds came as naturally as they would from an actor on the stage.

He took a ball from the table and the rebound coincided with the enunciation of the words, not only the sight of the ball, but the sound of its impact on the platform. He then said:—

"I will now show you more distinctly by taking a plate which you see from the table and smashing it on the floor."

MARVELLOUS EXHIBITION.

Exactly as he did so the plate went to the floor, as the audience could see, and smashed into smithereens, the sound of the smash and the rebound of the splinters coinciding with the motion and the words of the picture man. In one sense it may be unfair to call him a picture man, for he was as much the real man as all those that we see every day in the motion pictures all over the world. One only difference from the actual man is noticeable that the speaker enunciated with great care and perhaps spoke more slowly than the average speaker. He gave another illustration by taking up an automobile horn and remarking:

"I will give you an idea of an automobile sounding its warning."

He seized a horn from the table and squeezed the bulb three times, the horn giving exactly as one would expect it to do if one had seen a chauffeur with his hands on the bulb, three separate blasts. With this the exhibition of the kinetophone proper ended, not, however, until the man on the screen had walked to the side of the stage and disappeared in the wings.

And so they work in the sunshine with the wide green country about them, a fortunate few of the many infirm who pass perhaps their whole lives in State institutions, where necessarily but little chance exists of developing what powers they may possess. Here at Shottery under the care of the committee which receives them from the State they spend three years learning to draw, to spin, to dye their wools and to weave, to study plant forms for new designs, and if at the end of this time they have become efficient workers they are taken on as weavers for a regular wage. The lame girl, for instance, formerly a sufferer from hip disease and infantile paralysis, has become a weaver of some note and is actually the most skilled worker in the school at present. She has just invested in Government stocks the second $500 that her own labor has won her.

KING GEORGE'S MAIL.

His Majesty Will Soon See Own Portrait on the Stamps.

King George is receiving about one hundred more letters per day than the late King, and in the case of private letters he is even more particular than was his father in personally answering each missive on the day it is received. On an average King George receives six hundred letters a day. Many of them are from cranks, who write giving advice on affairs of state. A great number come from charity organizations requesting subscriptions or patronage.

Queen Mary receives about three hundred letters a day, and she, too, is very punctilious in the matter of replies. At the General Post Office there are two sorting clerks always on duty attending only to Royal correspondence, and letters to any member of the Royal Family are delivered by special messenger.

King Edward, who wrote voluminous letters to his many "cousins" and nephews in Europe, carried on much of his correspondence from the writing room of the Marlborough Club. When he was away abroad he wrote regularly to his grandson, now Prince of Wales, and the boy replied once a week.

A tremendous stimulus has been given to stamp collecting by King George, who has the finest collection probably in the world. His latest acquisition was one of the two-penny stamps lately printed with King Edward's portrait upon them. The issue was destroyed the other day and only six stamps remain. One of them was presented to the King, another to the Prince of Wales, and a third will be preserved at the British Museum. Mystery surrounds the present resting place of the other three, but they are believed to be in the hands of Government officials.

The new stamps with King George's portrait will be ready in a few weeks hence, and are stated to be a distinct artistic improvement on the present ones.

tain of the Adventure sent two officers and eight men across the sound to gather wild greens for the ship's company. They failed to return, and searchers who were sent out finally discovered evidence of a tragedy in a number of baskets containing human flesh and fern root, also a hand of a white man. Grass Cove was previously conjectured to be the scene of the ancient tragedy, but Mr. McNab, however, has settled the question once and for all by discovering the exact spot where the Englishmen were murdered.

After Mr. McNab and the party of friends with him had decided that the massacre took place in a certain bend in Grass Cove—a conclusion to which they came by comparing the locality with the description given in Cook's papers—they went ashore and spoke to a settler, Mr. Greensill, who was living on the spot, regarding any evidences of the massacre that he may have seen. Mr. Greensill said he had dug up in his garden an old flint-lock, a barrel, a bayonet and some other kind of a weapon he was unable to identify.

This latter weapon Mr. McNab at once identified as an officer's hanger, which was doubtless the one used by Midshipman Rowe, who was in charge of the boat's crew. There was a description of the sword given in the accounts and they correspond exactly with the weapons dug up. It was with that hanger that Midshipman Rowe killed two Maoris and wounded the chief before being overpowered and killed. This discovery places beyond a shadow of a doubt the exact locality of the massacre, which took place on the spot now occupied as Mr. Greensill's garden in Grass Cove. Mr. McNab discounts the idea that the weapon may have been carried there from the fact that the locality exactly corresponds with the description given by Capt. Cook.

FEWER PAUPERS.

Decrease of Nearly Eighteen Thousand in Britain.

A natural sequel to the steady tale of increasing trade prosperity in Britain is the continued decrease in the number of paupers.

According to a recent Local Government Board return, the number of paupers in receipt of relief in England and Wales on Saturday, July 30, last was 759,128—a decrease of 17,702 compared with the corresponding Saturday in 1902. London showed a decrease of exactly 100.

A notable feature of the returns is that, while the indoor paupers for England and Wales actually increased slightly, the outdoor paupers were 19,295 fewer. The reason for this is that the indoor paupers are largely infirm and aged people who are too old to work. Old-age pensions no doubt helped to lessen the number of "out" paupers, for that welcome 5s. a week is often just enough to save the poor old folk from "the parish."

There were fewer outdoor paupers per 1,000 inhabitants in England and Wales on July 30 last than on the corresponding date in any year in the whole list of returns since 1870. "In" paupers, on the other hand, are bracketed with 1909 as higher than any year since 1870. But there are only 260,605 "in," as against 498,523 "out" paupers.

MORE TO COME.

As the lights on the picture stage went out and the lights of his laboratory were turned on Mr. Edison said, in his characteristically modest and deprecatory manner:

"Well, that's all we're going to show to-night. We've got a lot more, but we really ought not to have shown it all yet. I don't know how it happened. It's too soon. But we're on the right road; we ought to get there and we will. Perhaps we'll arrive in another year."

"What I want to do is not simply a little thing like this. I want to give grand opera. That's what we're aiming at."

It seemed to those present as if but one thing remains for Edison's genius to accomplish in the way of perfect spectacular representation and that was the reproduction in the picture of the natural colors of the scene presented.

STOKES-ADAMS DISEASE.

Man's Heart Beats Only Thirty-four Times a Minute.

Middlesex Hospital, London, England, is just now entertaining a patient whose heart beats only 34 times in a minute, instead of the usual 72 or thereabouts. This man is afflicted with what is known as the Stokes-Adams disease, first described in 1827 but still very rare. The patient is 48 years old, his temperature is normal, and the symptoms which took him to the hospital were muscular weakness and sudden losses of consciousness resembling epileptic fits. One physician says the losses of consciousness are due to anaemia of the brain. The heart beating at such a slow rate does not force sufficient blood into the brain vessels to nourish its tissues, so the brain "strikes" temporarily. The slow heart beat again (34 instead of 72) is probably due to an interruption of what might be called the local telephone service of the heart itself.

It is believed that the impulse which causes the heart to contract periodically passes from the upper to the lower chambers along a special band of muscle fibres. In the Stokes-Adams disease these fibres don't work and the impulse is not properly transmitted.

FIRE-PROOF CONSTRUCTION.

A new method of fire-proof construction for small buildings has been invented in response to the growing demand. Steel tubing filled with concrete is used for the frame, and a network of wire for the basis of walls, floors and roof. On this skeleton a concrete house of such strength can be built that, it is claimed, it will be practically earthquake-proof. Six-inch pipe, steel wire and expanded metal, malleable iron fittings and cement are the materials used. The wires are strung to a tension of 1,000 pounds, and bind the whole together with enormous solidity. On them the concrete is spread three inches thick in spans not exceeding 16 feet. Construction is so simple that unskilled labor can be largely used.

SIMPLE TOYS FOR ROYALTY.

Queen's Children Not Being Spoiled by Over Indulgence.

Miss Grigsby, of New York, recently received an evidence of the length to which Queen Mary goes in a desire to imbue her children with simple tastes. Miss Grigsby is a favorite with the royal children, whom she knows through their French governess, and when little Prince John was ill a short time ago she begged to be allowed to send him a Teddy bear to replace a worn-out one he had been in the habit of taking to bed with him after the fashion of many children, royal and otherwise.

The Queen consented that the Prince should accept the gift, and Miss Grigsby straightway purchased the largest, fattest and most elaborate Teddy bear possible, which she despatched to the palace. Her surprise was great when the bear came back again to her with a little note from the Queen saying that she always liked the children to have only the most unpretentious toys, and that as Prince John's last Teddy bear was but a quarter of the size of the present one she considered it would be better to have the same kind. The American hurriedly exchanged the large, robust and costly Teddy for a most modest specimen of the breed.

The same treatment is accorded Princess Mary. Her dolls have always been of a simple kind, and she is required to make their clothes herself, in the intervals of stitching flannel petticoats for the poor, with which task she occupies much of her time.

PROGRESS OF LIQUID FUEL.

Thus far liquid fuel has generally been employed only for steam production, but an indication of the wide application that it may have in many forms of industry is afforded by the experience of the owners of a large glass manufactory at South Hackney, England. The experiments there were begun seven years ago, and after overcoming many difficulties a special form of burner was evolved which appears to be entirely satisfactory. Four to five thousand gallons of oil are burned every week, with perfect combustion and a total absence of smoke, and the temperatures obtained range from that of a baker's oven to that required for melting crucible steel. Elsewhere in England liquid fuel has recently been applied to such industries as the distillation of petroleum, steel-smelting, heating the kilns for the production of art-tile glazing, carbonizing electric-light filaments, and heating furnaces of various kinds.

INDIFFERENCE TO RELIGION

Is It Due to the Assumption That It Asks Too Much of Us?

"To give unto them beauty for ashes."—Isaiah lxi. 3.

Those who make up their minds to get as much enjoyment out of life as possible regard religion as a serious hindrance to their purposes. The masses, drifting unheeding by the churches, do so not out of intentional opposition but because the way of the church does not appear to be worth while; it seems to demand so much more than it offers.

No serious person doubts that the life which neglects the real values of sincere religion is foolishly guilty of serious self-deprivation. But who is responsible for the misapprehension of religion which leads the thoughtless so readily to reject it?

It is childish folly to say that they are led of the devil, neither do any intentionally slight their own advantage. The tragedy of it all as it goes on is that here is life and men are so led as to choose death.

Indifference to religion is due often to ignorance and to misunderstanding for which religious people are largely responsible. If the religious life were known for what it really is it would not so often be rejected lightly. But we have made it undesirable, unattractive, and have offered it to men as a present weariness and pain which is to be the price of a future, perpetual but confessedly somewhat intangible peace and blessedness.

We overemphasize the elements of loss, pain, deprivation, hardship, and sorrow. We talk too much of a cross to be borne with agony and too little of an inner which make it easier to bear even the heaviest cross than it would be to fear the jester's lightest bauble. We talk of the way of sorrow and fail to show how it is the only way in which any human being has ever found strength and calm.

We tend too much to postpone the profits of piety. Men will not be content always to deal in the future, and it is a degradation of faith to make it little more than a speculation in heavenly felicity by the investment of earthly misery. The right life looks out to choose amongst all goods the highest good; it discerns the most broadly comprehensive and enduring good; it chooses the beauty of goodness rather than the ashes of desire.

For those who have appetite for appreciation of life's real and permanent values there can be no other way of living than that which sets the interests of the higher life first, that which is willing to let the lower serve and bear its burdens that the nobler may develop to its best. The wise seek the prizes that do not fade and these are to be had only by refusing the gauds and folly of the passing hour.

But if we who have these unfading glories talk as though the way of this finer, better life were as a passing through a valley of weeping, as though there were neither light nor joy here and as though life for us all meant the loss of vigor, joy, and influence, what wonder lovers of life loathe our way. We have too long libeled the right of way of life.

The people who are praying to be nothing, who want to be as weak and as useless as a rose leaf tossed on a billow, who are proud of an anaemic, pulseless existence, imagining that by the destitution of their lives they

GLORIFY THE DEITY.

Only life, large, rich, full, free, can glorify the lord of all life. If religion does not mean the largest, best, highest life, what right have we to urge it on men?

The great Teacher of religion called on men to follow him into life more abundant. If we can but show men that the way of religion is the way of a richer, saner, happier life, there will be no difficulty in persuading them to this way. Every human heart is hungry for goodness, truth, and love, longing to come out of the desert of burnt out desires into the calm of right living.

But to the man who passes by the church seems to stand asking for much and offering little, demanding intellectual subjection to forms of thought and personal subjection to duties and self-denial. A religion of negation can never be called a gospel. Men can only learn the blessedness and wisdom of giving up some things as they see the higher and better things thus to be gained.

People are not anxious to empty their lives; they desire to fill them. The rush for pleasure and amusement is part of the expression of our hunger for crowded living. Men need to know how much they are missing by shutting out from themselves this rich circle of spiritual thought and feeling, how they are robbing themselves when they fail to develop the religious aspects of life.

LOAF RECIPES.

Veal Loaf.—Buy one-half pound ham trimmings and one and one-half pound veal. Put the meat in water, season and boil until it is tender. Have a cupful of stock left. Drain the meat and run through a food chopper. Into a long narrow pan put half of the meat on which lay, end to end, four or five hard boiled eggs. Now put in the rest of the meat. Over this pour the stock into which has been dissolved one tablespoon of gelatin. Set aside to cool and when set, slice thin and serve with lettuce or parsley.

Cheese Loaf.—Grate one-half pound cheese. Mix one pint of coarsely crumbed bread with one-half pint of minced boiled ham from which all fat has been removed. Line a buttered pan with some of the breadcrumbs mixture; place over the crumbs some of the cheese and continue in this manner until dish is filled; add salt and pepper to season, and pour over all one pint of milk. Let stand five minutes, then bake in moderate oven for twenty minutes. Run a knife around the edges of the pan, inverting on a warm dish when ready to serve. A tomato sauce is poured over the cheese just before sending in to table.

A New Recipe.—A novel way to fix veal or beef loaf for a luncheon or picnic is to put on three hard boiled eggs in the centre of the loaf before baking and then, when it is cut in slices the pieces of egg in the center of each slice adds much to the appearance.

Meat Loaf.—One and one-half pounds Hamburger steak, one-half pound salt pork, six crackers, rolled; two eggs, beaten. Add to one-half pint milk; mix with the above; salt, pepper, pinch of paprika, sage, and two small onions, chopped fine. Press into pan after having mixed thoroughly, and add one-half pint of milk, into which you put two tablespoonfuls of bacon fat; throw over top of loaf; it will absorb all of the milk in baking. Will serve fourteen people, the cost of which is less than 30 cents. Bake two hours in slow oven.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Pompeian Corn.—Put into a skillet a lump of butter the size of a walnut, add corn, season with salt, pepper (a little paprika preferable) and a small quantity of light brown sugar. Fry for twenty minutes stirring frequently so that it will not scorch. The sugar makes the corn brown nicely and is delicious. Serve steaming hot.

Sauteed Green Tomatoes.—Cut smooth, round, green tomatoes into three-eighths inch slices sprinkle with salt, and let stand about two hours. Wash, dry, roll in egg, then cracker or bread crumbs. Saute in butter or half butter and half lard. Be sure to cover and let them cook slowly, browning first on one side, then on the other. This is a fine vegetable dish for late summer and fall.

Fried Peaches.—Take ripe peaches, pare and slice in halves, sprinkle with sugar, dip in egg and cracker crumbs. Fry in butter to a golden brown. Serve hot with fried chick-with raisins. Mix all together and bake in pie wash cover.

Angel Parfait.—Place over the fire in a small sauce pan half a cupful of sugar and water. Stir until the sugar dissolves. Then boil without stirring until it spins a thread. Meanwhile beat until stiff and dry the whites of three eggs and add to them slowly the hot syrup after it has been taken from the fire for about half a minute. Beat well and flavor with vanilla or any preferred flavoring. When cold stir in gently a pint of cream, well whipped and drained. Put into a small mold and pack at once in ice and salt for about four hours. Serve with angel food cake.

Nut Bread.—Two eggs, one cup sugar mixed with eggs, two cups sweet milk, four cups sifted flour, four teaspoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoonful salt, one cup nut meats chopped. Put in two tins let raise thirty or forty minutes, and bake in a moderate oven forty-five minutes.

Novel Dessert.—A novel dessert may be made by using oranges and cranberries together. Cook the cranberries as for sauce and pour over oranges with a light sprinkling of sugar over them. They should, of course, be sectioned. Serve with whipped cream.

Apple Sherbet.—Take half a gallon of fresh cider, add the juice of three lemons, half pound of sugar, and whites of six eggs. Freeze hard.

USEFUL HINTS.

Take your clothes from the line as soon as possible after they are dry. They are likely to become too stiff if left out longer than necessary.

Tarnished silver is easily cleaned with powdered whiting mixed to a paste with ammonia and water. Rub the paste on with one leather and have another leather to polish it off again.

Gilt on china will not last long soda be used in the washing of it; therefore, use soapy water for washing teacups, etc., patterned with gilt, and keep soda carefully away from them.

To clean furred iron kettles place inside a small handful of unslaked lime. Fill with water and boil for half an hour. Rinse well, and water may be used after standing all night if found to be clear.

Cups and dishes which have become brown from constant use in baking may be made new and bright by rubbing the stains with a flannel dipped in whiting.

Sick headache is mostly caused by too much acidity in the stomach. A pretty good cure consists in merely eating a little burnt or very brown bread-crust.

Never waken a child suddenly, and never carry a baby immediately into a glaring light when he wakes up; the sudden impression of light is very bad for the eyes.

Instead of taking lace yokes and cuffs out of dresses to wash when soiled, if they are rubbed with dry starch, then rubbed thoroughly, the lace will look like new.

Apply glycerine to a scald directly the accident happens, and cover it up with strips of rag soaked in glycerine. If the glycerine is not at hand, apply salad oil in the same way.

It is pointed out by a medical contemporary that there is a right way and a wrong way of coughing. Some chronic coughers seem to be proud of the terrible noise they make.

Lesson II. The Parable of the Talents, Matt. 25. 14-30. Golden Text, Matt. 25. 21.

Verse 14. A man—Christ, as a merchant, whose chief interest is to increase his possessions by careful investment.

Going into another country—Same word as in Matt. 21. 33. Not "a far country," as in Authorized Versions. Christ is never a great way off from his servants. All that is intended is that in visible presence he is removed from them for a time while they trade for him. Why he goes away is not indicated. In the parable of the pounds the nobleman goes to "receive for himself a kingdom."

His own servants. Indicating that they are on terms of intimacy with their master. This makes it possible for him to assign the talents according to their several abilities. It also gives them their knowledge of his will, so that he does not need to instruct them as to the use they are to make of the goods. They know without being told, that they are to trade till he returns (Luke 19. 13).

15. Talents.—See Word Studies for July 31. Five talents would be something over $5,000, a large sum to intrust to a servant. Some servants of the kingdom are rarely endowed, God lavishing upon them his graces and advantages. But such also have heavier obligations than the man of two talents. The man of one talent, on the other hand, though less freely endowed, is not to despise the opportunity which he has in his own sphere. All are to remember that the talents are not gifts outright, but sacred trusts out of which each is to make the very utmost.

16. Straightway.—Note the difference here between the two versions. The Revision gives better point to the story, and is grammatically correct. The merit of the first servant is, that he lost no time in doing with his money exactly what his lord had intended—traded, and made other five talents. The immediate and sole business of Christ's service and to secure as large a return as possible.

17. Gained other two. That is, in lieu of unreserving devotion to his master's interests, though he has less working capital, he does as well as his fellow of five talents, because he doubles what he has received.

18. Hid his lord's money.—He might at least have doubled it by careful investment. By depositing it in the earth, he not only keeps it from diminution, which seems like an innocent enough purpose, but prevents the legitimate increase it might have had in other hands.

19. After a long time the lord... cometh.—Suggesting that the slothful servant had plenty of time to profit by the example of his fellows. A man's probation is extended until the last grain of possibility of his turning is exhausted. None can say in the day of reckoning that his failure was due to a lack of opportunity.

21. Faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many.—This throws light upon the life hereafter. Reward for fidelity is not to be an unemployed period of quiet, but an opportunity for continued service, and service on a larger scale. The endowment of five talents and reward are precisely the same, showing that what counts in the end is, not rich natural or spiritual endowment, but high devotion to Him whom we serve. Since both were equally zealous and achieved the same result, they were received with equal warmth.

24. I knew thee that thou art a hard man—This is an excuse rather than a reason. Long before his lord returned his heart must have smitten him with the conviction that he ought to dig up the talent and put it into the current of trade. But now, when all opportunity has fled, he tries to throw the responsibility upon the master: "Is he not a man of greed, who without conscience reaps dishonest riches from other men's toil?"

25. I was afraid—As a matter of fact, his sole, unpardonable fault was, that he was lazy. Fear lest he should fail to make a fair profit from his investment is simply feigned.

26. Thou knowest—He convicts the servant out of his own mouth; for, if the charge were true (and the master makes no attempt to justify himself from it), then this wicked servant, who now tries to deceive his lord, had he not been shamefully slothful, would at least have taken this one talent and deposited it with the bankers, where it could draw interest (27). This only shows that it was his laziness, and not his false estimate of his lord's character, that led him to hide the money. If Christ's one-talent workers feel themselves unequal to any independent profitable investment of their meager gifts, they can at least associate themselves with the more richly dowered, and these will show them the method of increase.

28. Failure to use one's gifts will at last result in inability to use them. There is a spiritual as well as a physical atrophy. Christ at last dismisses from his service those who fritter away their opportunities in idleness. It cannot excuse us that only a little has been committed to our charge. The administration of the lilies is not overlooked by our Lord and Master.

29. Unto every one that hath—This is a law of life. As disuse ends in final loss, so wise and faithful use results in increase. There was a Jewish saying, "He who increases not decreases."

30. Cast ye out the unprofitable servant.—His terrible punishment is simply an account of uselessness. How much more severe ought the condemnation to have been if he had squandered away the money of his master! If we wish in the end to come in from the outer darkness and enjoy the friendly light of the banqueting hall, we must not shrink from risking our talents, however slight, in the service of Him who, though exacting to the last degree, trod the hard way for us, that we might escape the bitterness of the weeping and the gnashing.

REQUISITE KNOWLEDGE.

A country physician was driving through a village, and saw a man amusing a crowd with the antics of his trick dog.

The doctor pulled up and said, "My dear man, how do you manage to train your dog that way? I can't teach mine a single trick."

The man looked up, with a simple rustic look, and replied, "Well, you see, it's this way. You have to know more'n the dog, or you can't learn him nothin'!"

let them cool slowly, browning first on one side, then on the other. This is a fine vegetable dish for late summer and fall.

Fried Peaches.—Take ripe peaches, pare and slice in halves, sprinkle with sugar, dip in egg and cracker crumbs. Fry in butter to a golden brown. Serve hot with fried chicken.

MINT RECIPES.

Mint Extract.—The extract of the mint obtained by placing the mint leaves, carefully washed, in steep pan of cold water and allowing them to boil a few minutes. Strain and cool.

Mint Punch.—Boil one and one-half cups of sugar in a pint of water. When cool add the strained juice of four lemons and as much of the essence from the cup steeped mint leaves as is desired. Color with green vegetable coloring. One or two oranges will add to the flavor of the punch. When ready to use, add two quarts of water.

Mint Ice.—Boil two cups of sugar in a pint of water five minutes; add the juice of five lemons and enough water from the cup of mint leaves to give the desired strength of flavor. Color with vegetable coloring; when partly frozen add the beaten white of one egg. Serve in sherbet glasses with a jot of whipped cream in which a bud of mint has been placed.

Mint Cucumber Sandwiches.—For light summer refreshments, dainty and delicious sandwiches may be made by dipping thin slices of fresh young cucumbers in well seasoned French dressing and placed butter. These sandwiches should be put together as short a time as possible before serving, and except the butter, everything should be iced with a sprinkling of finely chopped fresh mint between slices of white bread spread with unsalted.

Mint Jelly.—Boil together one cupful of clean mint leaves, one cupful of sugar, and one cupful of vinegar five minutes. Strain and pour the mixture over one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin which has been soaked in a little cold water. Add one-fourth of a teaspoonful each of salt and paprika. Color with green vegetable coloring. Pour in jelly glasses or in a small square pan and cut in cubes when it has hardened. This makes a nice garnish and relish to serve with lamb or mutton. The mint ice may also accompany lamb or mutton in the meat course of a luncheon or dinner.

TASTY DESSERTS.

Iced Cocoa.—Mix one-half cup cocoa, three-fourths cup sugar, and one cup water and boil until it forms a thick syrup. Cool and pour into a jar or bottle and place on ice. Add one tablespoonful to each glass of cold milk for a service.

Cottage Pudding.—Cream one cup of sugar with butter the size of a walnut. Add two well beaten eggs, one-half cupful milk, one and one-half cupfuls flour with which two teaspoonfuls of baking powder have been sifted. Bake twenty minutes and serve at once with mashed, sweetened raspberries.

Sour Cream Pie.—One cupful chopped apple, one cupful of seeded raisins, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of sour cream, one-half cupful of sour milk, one-quarter teaspoonful each of cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Peel apples and chop

It is pointed out by a medical contemporary that there is a right way and a wrong way of coughing. Some chronic coughers seem to be proud of the terrible noise they make.

If you wish to live long and be healthy and happy, fill your lungs day and night with pure, fresh air, and let your system absorb all the sunshine you can possible secure for it.

Many persons do not drink a sufficient supply of water to maintain health. Six glasses a day is sometimes necessary to help carry off the impurities of the human system.

In preserving, canning and jelly-making iron or tin utensils should never be used. The fruit acids attack these metals, and so give a bad color and metallic taste to the products.

HOW HE DID IT.

A lawyer once asked a man who had at various times sat on several juries: "Who influenced you most—the lawyers, the witnesses, or the judge?" He expected to get some useful and interesting information from so experienced a jurymen. This was the man's reply:

"I'll tell yer, sir, 'ow I makes up my mind. I'm a plain man, and a reasonin' man, and I ain't influenced by anything the lawyers say; no; nor by what the Judge says. I just looks at the man in the docks and I says: 'If he ain't done nothing, why is he there?' And I brings 'em all in guilty."

VEGETABLES.

Beets.—To each two quarts of vinegar add one-half cupful maple syrup, two tablespoonfuls brown sugar, five whole cloves, and one-half teaspoonful caraway seeds. Boil five minutes and pour over boiled, peeled, and quartered beets. Seal in jars while hot.

Stuffed Onions.—Peel onions and take out center, parboil five minutes. Fill with stuffing of bread-crumbs, small pieces of chopped bacon, salt and pepper. Bake one hour and five minutes. Sprinkle breadcrumbs over top.

DARING WORK IN A FOG.

Clever Seamanship of a Captain in a Landlocked Harbor.

"The greatest piece of seamanship I ever saw," said a traveler, "was on a trip to Halifax. It was a marvel, and this is how it happened.

"We were steaming along about twelve hours out from our destination one summer afternoon. It had been clear all day, and the sea was beautifully blue, but about 4 o'clock the fog began to shut down—one of those swift, dense fogs that come on that coast and shroud a boat from sight in less time than it takes to tell of it. Of course the fog whistles began to blow, and many of the passengers got nervous under the strain of its continued howling.

"After dinner I went up on the bridge and was permitted to stay. The captain would not enter into any conversation—that is, I could not talk to him, but in his restless pacing up and down the bridge he would frequently make a remark to me. It went on that way for hours, the fog as thick as steam and the whistle reiterating its mournful warning.

"At length the captain gave a sharp order. 'Two points, northwest by north,' he said. 'No, a little more—that's right,' he finished as his command was executed. I was bewildered, and my face must have shown it as he passed me, for he vouchsafed the explanation that he wanted to pass within a few hundred feet of a certain whistling buoy near the harbor. I said nothing, but I did not understand. Why, the night was so thick that it was hard work to see from the bridge to the rail, and what could he mean by making a buoy?

"On and on we went, and always the fog seemed to me thicker. I could not sleep, and most of the night I was on the bridge. When it must have been nearly morning a new whistling began to sound on our starboard bow, as nearly as I could judge. It was a fearful fog siren, and kept getting nearer and nearer. We had stopped whistling, and the passengers were terribly frightened. I looked at one external officer who stood with me on the bridge, and his face was like a dead man's. Mine must have been also.

"Then, just as it seemed that some giant steamship must strike us, so close was the whistling, the fog lifted like a veil, and there, not 150 feet away, was the buoy that the captain had mentioned.

"Almost at once the fog closed down again; but, do you know, he took us past two warships, into the landlocked harbor and up to the dock in it. It was magnificent, and, though we really could not put our admiration in tangible form, we got together and gave him a gold watch on the return voyage as a little souvenir."—New York Post.

O. Henry Was a Shade Smarter Than the Magazine Man.

A friend of the late O. Henry writes of him: "He was reckless in spending money and frequently gave elevator boys and bellboys five and ten dollar notes. But he wasn't 'easy' despite his financial regardlessness.

"His friends recently narrated an incident showing the man's shrewdness. A magazine noted for 'slow pay,' they said, contracted with him for a three part story for which he was to receive $1,500. He got $500 advance before starting to work and when he turned in the second installment (none of it had been printed yet) got $500 more and asked for the third $500 as an advance before finishing the tale.

STUPID PEOPLE.

Couldn't Tell What Grew Up Straight and Was Served on Toast.

Never ask any one to supply you with a missing word, says a writer in the Atchison Globe, and if the experience which he relates is typical it is good advice. A woman was engaged recently in writing a letter to a friend, in which she was telling of what they had to eat at a party. She was getting along very well when all of a sudden she stopped to think. "What," she called to her family, "is that green stuff that grows up straight?"

"Evergreen trees," some one replied. "Oh, no," said the woman; "I mean something to eat."

"Onions," was the reply.

"No," she said, "not onions."

"Lettuce," "beans," "peas," and so on, were all called out by the family, all anxious to supply the missing word.

"None of them is right," said the woman. Then she tried a new tack.

"What is it," she said, "they serve on toast?"

"Poached eggs," said one member of the family.

"Jam," said another.

Then the woman got up, tore her letter into pieces and put the thing off till later on.

Three days later she was in a grocery store and saw something marked "15 cents a bunch" that sent her running all the way home.

"It was asparagus!" she cried. "I should think some of you might have known it was asparagus! Didn't I say it grew up straight and was served on toast?"

ARSENIC POISONING.

The Torture That Ensues Before Death Brings Relief.

When a single dose of arsenic in sufficient quantity to be felt has been taken colicky pains, bowel disorder and perhaps nausea result. In the course of an hour after a poisonous dose has been taken an intense burning pain is felt in the esophagus and stomach. This spreads to the entire anterior portion of the lower part of the trunk. A sense of constriction at the throat and an acid, metallic taste accompany the pain. Then vomiting and relaxation of the bowels begin. As the case progresses the symptoms increase in intensity. Then comes a thirst that water will not allay, although it apparently increases the stomach disturbance. The victim groans and writhes.

Now he implores the doctor to save him. Then he begs to be killed and put out of pain. The extremities become icy. The pulse is small, feeble and frequent, and the breathing is labored, embarrassed and painful because of abdominal tenderness. The surface of the body becomes dark and of that bluish color that medical men call cyanosed. Violent cramps add their torture, exhaustion becomes collapse, convulsions or coma ensues, and death ends the agony. The torture lasts sometimes from five to twenty hours.

In some cases these symptoms occur, but in a modified form, and the doctor will apparently get the better of the disease. The remission will be but for a day or two. Then the abdomen will swell, and icy coldness will pervade the frame. Shivering will become pronounced trembling, then cramps, convulsions and death.

IRONCLAD CASTE.

Its Rule Among the Hindus Absolute and Unchangeable.

THE POWER OF THE BRAHMAN

All the Wealth of the World Would Not Enable a Lower Caste Hindu to Wed Into His Family or Touch His Hand—Tyranical Social Divisions.

Caste distinction in India is a thing difficult for a foreigner to comprehend. All the racial or religious distinctions which separate European nations from each other and divide them within themselves do not equal the number of classes into which the Hindus are divided by what is known as "caste."

The 200,000,000 Hindus are made up of diverse racial elements and speak about nineteen developed languages and over 100 dialects. They are again divided into over 3,000 castes, most of them with subcastes. One of these castes, the Brahmins, is split up into more than 800 subcastes, of which none will intermarry and few will eat together.

The term "caste" includes so many things that it is difficult to define it. There are, however, two properties essential to a true caste—first, there is no entry except by birth; second, marriage outside the caste is absolutely forbidden. To preserve the purity and maintain the exclusiveness of the society many minute rules of conduct, many restrictions on food and many ceremonial observances are imposed on the members and enforced by penalties which cannot be evaded, against which there is no appeal and which in extreme cases follow the offender beyond the grave.

But that is not all. The relations of castes to each other are as much a matter of religious observance as the rules for their internal regulation. The Brahmins are the highest admittedly and undoubtedly superior to all the rest. After them come those who are acknowledged to be twice born. The less honored follow in a graduated descent until the untouchable and unspeakable are reached at the lowest depth.

It may be urged that the separation between the Brahman and, let us say, the Kurni market gardener is no wider than that between the peer of the United Kingdom and the coal miner. There is this essential difference—that it is impossible for an Indian to change his caste. The coal miner may be elected to parliament, may become a cabinet minister and if he can make money enough may marry his son to a duke's daughter.

The Kurni must remain a Kurni. All the wealth of Croesus will not enable him to make an alliance with a Brahman family or to touch a Brahman's hand. The members of a caste may and in some cases do raise themselves in the sight of other castes by adopting more elaborate ceremonies and more scrupulous observances.

A half civilized Gond, for example, may find himself brought into contact with Hindus as the blow encroaches on the forest. He tries to raise his position and add to his self respect by adopting the exclusiveness of his Hindu neighbors. He will even outdo them if he can, and if the Hindu is scrupulous about his food the convert will wash the very wood with which his dinner is cooked.

No endeavors of this kind, however, will avail to lessen by a hair's breadth the distance between him and the caste Hindu or even to induce the

A FAMILY GAME.

The duck family lived in the orchard; so did the old cock and the hens; but they were so busy with their own affairs that they paid but little attention to the ducks, that were busy, too, and did not care. Besides, they had a secret, for one day Mrs. Duck had found a small hollow in the ground near the trunk of one of the oldest apple-trees, where the grass was tall, and there were some blackberry briars, and there she decided to make a nest.

First she lined it all smoothly with the long grass, and then inside that she put a layer of soft, downy feathers that she pulled from her own breast. Here she had laid her eggs, and was sitting on them.

When she wished to leave it to get food and take a little exercise, for it is tiresome sitting so long, she would pull the feathers over her eggs, and they were kept warm, and also hidden from curious eyes.

One summer morning there was great excitement in the old orchard. The old cock and hens stopped to look, and the little chickens came running from every direction to see the sight, for Mrs. Duck was waddling along very proudly, with eleven small ducklings running by her side, each a yellow ball of down, with tiny black eyes and bright orange-red feet. She paraded them all about the orchard.

Such good times as they had all the summer long! They never seemed to be tired. The old cock and hens and the little chicks and the robins in the trees went to bed as soon as it was dark, and put their heads under their wings and slept till daylight, but the duck family just squatted in the grass under the trees.

One beautiful, bright moonlight night the little boy who had the care of them waked, and thought he heard a strange noise outdoors, and going softly to the window, he looked into the orchard, where he saw a very funny sight. All the ducks were marching in procession, the big ducks at the head and all the little ducklings behind in Indian file, like a lot of children playing at soldiers. And round and round they went, and in and out of the shadows, all the time quacking very softly, and bowing politely to the right and left, as ducks and pigeons do. Never once did the little ducks get out of line nor crowd each other.

The little boy found that they played this queer little game many happy nights, when all the other inhabitants of the orchard were sound asleep. He called it the "Duckings' Drill."—Youth's Companion.

Trapping Muskrats.

Numbers of mechanical traps to catch muskrats have been invented and tried, but none gives more satisfaction than the old floating barrel trap that has been in use for many years. Both ends are left closed, and a hole about eight by twelve inches square is sawed in the side. A strong cleat is nailed across each end, the cleats projecting six or eight inches beyond the barrel, and upon the cleats are nailed two boards, one on each side of the barrel and several inches longer. Water then is placed in the barrel so

He got $500 advance before starting to work and when he turned in the second installment (none of it had been printed yet) got $500 more and asked for the third $500 as an advance before finishing the tale.

"The editor in an effort to save money apparently declared that, after all, the story didn't appear to be worth more than $1,000—this when he had the two installments in his office.

"All right," said O. Henry; "I won't write the third one then." And he didn't. He laughed at the editor.

"Well, then," said the latter. "I'll run the two parts and then let our readers have a guessing contest as to how the story ends—and put up, perhaps, a $500 prize to the winner."

"For a moment the author thought he was outwitted. Then he said: 'Go ahead, and I'll win the prize.' He intended to win it too!"—Boston Herald.

A DREAM JOURNEY.

It Was a Very Long One, but It Took Only a Few Minutes.

"Dreams are curious things," remarked the amateur psychologist. "Time does not seem to enter into their composition at all. For instance, the other day I was sitting on the porch of a hotel with a friend of mine smoking after lunch. It was a drowsy day, and conversation lagged. Presently I saw my friend nodding in his chair. He had dozed off, holding his lighted cigar in his left hand, which was folded over his right. His left hand relaxed, and the end of the cigar came in gentle contact with the right hand, inflicting a slight burn.

"The devil it won't!" exclaimed my friend, waving with a start.

"The sentence sounded so incongruous that I burst out laughing. 'Won't what?' I asked.

"How long have I been asleep?" he asked.

"Not more than a couple of minutes," I replied.

"It doesn't seem possible," he said. "During that time I had a dream that pretty nearly took me around the world. I sailed for Southampton, did England, France, Switzerland and a part of Italy, then through the orient to India. It was in India that I became much interested in one of the native snake charmers. He had the snakes crawling all over him and offered me one to fondle. I told him I was afraid it would bite me. He assured me that it wouldn't, and I took the reptile in my hand. It promptly fastened its fangs in me. I said, 'The devil it won't!' and dropped it, and then I woke up."

"I explained the episode of the lighted cigar," concluded the amateur psychologist, "and we both laughed."—New York Sun.

Southey's Industry.

Southey probably deserves to rank as the most industrious of authors. In the greater part of his life he spent fourteen hours a day in composition. He had six tables in his library. He wrote poetry at one, history at another, criticism at a third, and so on with the other subjects upon which he was engaged. He once described to Mme. de Stael the division of his time—two hours before breakfast for history, two hours for reading after, two hours for the composition of poetry, two hours for criticism, and so on through all his working day. "And pray, Mr. Southey," asked madam, "when do you think?"—London Chronicle.

The Picture It Brought From Out a Dark Cavern.

Dr. Francis Clark told an interesting story of a youth living in Maine who was out in the woods one day taking photographs of attractive bits of scenery. He came upon the mouth of a little cavern between the rocks, and he said to himself, "I will see what sort of picture I can get out of that cave," and as it was a dark day he decided to take a "time exposure" instead of a "snapshot." Steadying the camera upon his knee as well as he could at the edge of the cave, he gave the sensitive plate a long, deliberate look at the semidarkness within. Then he continued his tramp through the woods and after a few hours returned to his camp.

Several weeks afterward, when developing his plates, you can imagine his astonishment to see in the picture, in the very center of the cavern, with arched back and bristling fur and within springing distance of the spot where he had balanced his camera, a huge Canada lynx that might easily have destroyed his life. And yet he came and went and saw no signs of danger.—Christian Herald.

Proving a Statement.

A certain minister, who is an emphatic preacher, is at times at a loss to give his utterances proper weight. For instance, he'll say:

"This statement is as true as is the night which will follow day," or "as true as that the trees will bud in spring."

Sometimes it happens that the doctor has more statements than he has illustrations to give them weight. On one such occasion he remarked, "This is as true as the"—Here the doctor halted. He paused a few moments, and then his face illumined—"as true as is the statement that some member is yet on his or her way to church."

A few moments later a lady entered the edifice and swept grandly up the aisle. The doctor's face assumed an "I told you so" appearance. The congregation began to smile, then to laugh. Sympathy for the embarrassed lady, however, soon subdued the apparently uncontrollable mirth.

The Parrots of Mexico.

What the wild pigeon once was in point of numbers to the United States the parrot, of varying shades of color and all sizes, is to old Mexico. Flights of these birds frequently darken the midday sun in the hot country, and they become so tame around the camps of engineers that the birds are given individual names and soon become regular pets. Whenever the parrots desert the forest and alight on the ground in the open spaces of the jungle the natives recognize their actions as sure warning of an impending earthquake. American engineers endorse this belief and assert that serious accidents which might have been averted have resulted when the warning of the birds was noted, but unheeded.

adopting the exclusiveness of his Hindu neighbors. He will even outdo them if he can, and if the Hindu is scrupulous about his food the convert will wash the very wood with which his dinner is cooked.

No endeavors of this kind, however, will avail to lessen by a hair's breadth the distance between him and the caste Hindu or even to induce the Hindu barber to look upon him as a client whose chin he may shave and whose toe nails he may pare without degradation.

Another point connected with caste which has a very practical bearing and must be taken into account is the power of coercion which it gives to the brotherhood. If a man is excommunicated by his caste fellows nobody in the caste will marry him or will accept water from his hands or will eat with him.

If he is married his wife will not touch him or speak to him. He is dead to his family. The priest will not perform ceremonies for him. The village barber will not shave him, and the washerwoman will not wash his clothes. These are the methods of bringing pressure on the man. The strictest boycott which Irishmen have invented is mild compared to the final sentence of a caste punishment.

A system like this is a stern fact which has to be faced. There is not a police case or a civil case or a trial at the sessions, there is hardly an appointment to an office in India of whatever degree, in which the matter of caste has not to be considered. It forces itself into every assessment of land revenue, into every adjudication of rent. It affects the administration of justice, the proceedings of municipal and district councils.

The influence and power of the Brahman and the idea that he is above the law and is not to be punished as other people are still alive, although a century of British justice has done something toward eradicating them. On the other hand, the suggestion that a man of a lower caste might rise to an equality or nearer to an equality with members of a caste above him is unthinkable. Where the low caste men are, there they must remain. If they behave themselves it will be made up to them in a future existence.—London Spectator.

A Grand Rout.

It is not always the largest foe who can make the greatest disturbance and cause the most confusion. In his "Hunting Grounds of the Great West" Richard Irving Dodge tells of a little incident of the Mexican war which proves that it is quality, not quantity, which is most effective.

While General Taylor's little army was marching from Corpus Christi to Matamoras a soldier of the flank of the column fired at a bull. The animal charged, and the soldier, taking to his heels, ran into the column. The bull, undaunted by the number of the enemy, followed him headlong, scattering several regiments like chaff, and finally escaped unhurt, having demoralized and put to flight an army which a few days after covered itself with glory by victoriously encountering five times its number of human enemies.

Not Coughing Today?

Yet you may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says. He knows. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Robust health is a great safeguard against attacks of throat and lung troubles, but constipation will destroy the best of health. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills.

STUPID PEOPLE.

Couldn't Tell What Grew Up Straight and Was Served on Toast.

Never ask any one to supply you with a missing word, says a writer in the Atchison Globe, and if the experience which he relates is typical it is good advice. A woman was engaged recently in writing a letter to a friend, in which she was telling of what they had to eat at a party. She was getting along very well when all of a sudden she stopped to think. "What," she called to her family, "is that green stuff that grows up straight?"

"Evergreen trees," some one replied. "Oh, no," said the woman; "I mean something to eat."

"Onions," was the reply.

"No," she said, "not onions."

"Lettuce," "beans," "peas," and so on, were all called out by the family, all anxious to supply the missing word.

"None of them is right," said the woman. Then she tried a new tack.

"What is it," she said, "they serve on toast?"

"Poached eggs," said one member of the family.

"Jam," said another.

Then the woman got up, tore her letter into pieces and put the thing off till later on.

Three days later she was in a grocery store and saw something marked "15 cents a bunch" that sent her running all the way home.

"It was asparagus!" she cried. "I should think some of you might have known it was asparagus! Didn't I say it grew up straight and was served on toast?"

ABSURD FASHIONS.

Hairdressing and Hats in the Time of Marie Antoinette.

Some of the fashions in France during the reign of unfortunate Queen Marie Antoinette were exceedingly absurd, particularly hairdressing and hats, which were trimmed with such an extravagant wealth of feathers that the coaches had to have their seats lowered. According to Mme. Campan, "mothers and husbands murmured, and the general rumor was that the queen would ruin the French ladies."

One day Louis XVI. decided to forbid the court in a body to follow the royal hunt in coaches. In order to be freer he wished only to permit real sportsmen to attend. The noble ladies immediately rebelled, and the Princess of Monaco criticised the decision by means of her headpiece, upon which arose a miniature royal coach, followed by two gentlemen on foot in gaiters. On the left of this was displayed a cypress garnished with black tears, the large roots being formed of crape.

More absurd still was the hairdressing of the mother of Louis Philippe, upon whose head every one could admire her son, the Duc de Beaujolais,

EXTRACT FROM TORONTO GLOBE, THRIFT AS A NATIONAL ASSET.

The Globe prints the text of a remarkable address delivered before the Employers' Association, of Toronto, by Mr. S. T. Bastedo, Superintendent of Government Annuities. The address should be read by every good Canadian, and carefully considered.

The day of opportunity on the American continent is passing. The free lands will be exhausted in another quarter of a century. Great cities here, as in Europe, must inevitably mean at times unemployment and suffering.

The fear of poverty must become ever present in many lives, and above all, the dread of poverty in old age, when the capacity of earning is gone.

There is need for provision to meet the conditions that will come as inevitably as to-morrow's sunrise.

Thoughtful men are beginning to see an end of the material resources of the continent and are preaching thrift. The conservation of the forests, of the water-powers, of the coal and iron, is preached daily from a hundred platforms. Here and there a voice is raised to tell us that we are as wasteful individually as in the national sphere, and that personal thrift is as much needed as collective thrift.

That lesson is reinforced when we read of men once eminent, rich and prosperous, dying in almshouses because they never recognized the necessity for saving. Let us come nearer home with the argument. There are ten thousand mortgaged homes in this city to-day in which every ounce of energy is devoted to keeping up appearances, to carrying the daily financial burden, homes in which there is nothing but dark foreboding when a look is cast forward to old age. To the hundreds of thousands of Canadians who are living up to their income, or just a little beyond it, Mr. Bastedo's address should appeal mightily.

The parliament of Canada has gone a long way to encourage the people of the Dominion to make provision for old age. It has established a Government Annuities system, under which it is hoped ultimately to make provision for the declining years of the great mass of the people. The Government pays the entire cost of management, and every dollar put in comes back to the annuitants with four per cent. compound interest. The money may be paid in at any money order office; it cannot be withdrawn, or seized for debt, or used in any other way. At 55 years of age, or later if preferred, the annuity begins, and continues till death. By supplementary provisions, if it is desired, the money paid in—should the depositor die before the annuity begins—is returned to his or her relatives with three per cent. interest. Should anyone begin to pay for an annuity and be unable to keep up the payments the amount—if insufficient to provide $50 per year of annuity—will be returned when the depositor reaches the age of fifty-five, together with three per cent. compound

My Big Bird

It Flies Above Savages and Fills Them With Terror.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Having worked a couple of years on an improvement for a flying machine, keeping my models securely locked in my barn that my devices might not be stolen by other aeroplane inventors, and having perfected them, I desired to try them. Not having confidence either in my fellow inventors or the practicability of patents I determined to take my airship to some unexplored country, attach my new machinery and make the necessary tests where, if they were successful, I alone would know about it. From San Francisco I shipped on board a vessel bound for a certain island in the Pacific ocean, and after a few weeks' voyage landed where I might experiment to my heart's content without fear of losing the benefit of my inventions.

I brought with me such modern contrivances as might be useful to me and some that would enable me to conciliate the natives among other things. I had a phonograph machine, toy gyroscopes, an electric hand lamp, a fieldglass and some fireworks.

Having at my request been put ashore at a point where there was no human being to be seen, I spent the first day putting together the parts of my aeroplane and equipping it. My fuel oils, etc., I placed under a projecting rock, storing also my belongings, including meat and drink. That night I slept under the ledge mentioned, and the next morning wheeling my machine on to a declivity by which I expected to get my start I took my seat, let go, rolled down the incline and began to rise.

Having attained a height of 1,000 feet, I devoted myself for a few hours to my improvements to the exclusion of all other surroundings and had the satisfaction to find that without exception they worked beautifully. That which I set most store by, a "brake," acted to a charm. Perhaps such an implement worked in so thin a medium as the air may not be considered practicable in any form. This is not so. I produced an attachment that stopped my machine within four lengths. Another matter I had attended to was one for keeping the machine on keel. I had observed the maintenance of a fixed plane of revolution by the gyroscope and applied the principle to my wings.

One thing I did that no other aeroplane constructor has ever done. I made it look like a bird. I used a single plane on each side shaped like a gull's wings, thus giving my machine the semblance of a bird. Fancy, then, suggested a pasteboard beak and the painting of the whole in varied colors!

Having satisfied myself that my inventions were each and every one a success, I permitted myself to look beneath me. My eye at once struck large numbers of the natives of the island running about in wild commotion. By those looking up at me I could discern the cause. Evidently the bird monster was at the bottom of their excitement. Some of them were scampering away as fast as their legs

In effect, therefore, there is placed at the disposal of every man, woman and child in Canada, without cost other than the expense of administration borne by all the people of Canada, a safe, convenient and simple way of providing for old age.

The movement is worthy of the encouragement of all leaders of public opinion. The young do not so well understand the shadow cast before by an old age of penury or financial anxiety as those of maturer years. They need sometimes to be reminded how that prince of good fellows, Robert Burns, looking back over a youth of folly and extravagance, sadly penned the lines:

"But pleasures are like poppies spread;
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed;
Or, like the snowflake on the river,
A moment white, then melts forever."

death. My eye at once struck large numbers of the natives of the island running about in wild commotion. By those looking up at me I could discern the cause. Evidently the bird monster was at the bottom of their excitement. Some of them were scampering away as fast as their legs would carry them, others were hiding in caves and under rocks, while some were vigorously digging holes to bury themselves in.

Thinking to take others unawares, I rose higher and sped over a matter of twenty miles. Seeing a number of natives about a fire, soaring, I watched them. I could see that some were bound, while others were heaping fuel on the fire. Feeling sure that cannibals were about to make a repast upon human beings, I drew near enough for them to discover my presence above them. They seemed to be paralyzed with astonishment. Sinking to a point about fifty feet above them, I shouted to them to unbind their prisoners. Not understanding my language, they were all the more frightened. I seized my phonograph and, pointing the horn at them, turned on the whoops of American Indians. Hearing such sounds from the throat of an enormous bird seemed to put vigor into their legs, and they ran in every direction.

Descending, I unbound the prisoners, who as soon as their limbs were loosed dropped on their knees before me and buried their faces in the dirt. I raised several of them, desiring to communicate with them, and, in order to invite their confidence, gave them come trinkets. Then I took my phonograph from my aeroplane and set it going with a ducky song. One of the natives pointed to himself, then to the phonograph, as much as to say, "There is a man in there." Going to the box, he looked down the horn to see him, then put his finger in, drawing it quickly out to prevent its being clutched. Not seeing or feeling anything, he looked at me and put his hand within a few inches of the ground to denote the height of the pygmy supposed to be in the box.

Having amused the simple creatures for awhile with the phonograph, I took up a toy gyroscope and set the wheel going. This to them was far more wonderful than ranking a man sing in a box. They could conceive of a mite of a man being in the box, but they could not conceive of a wheel revolving with but one axis, supported at any angle I chose to put it. Every one of them dropped on their knees before me, and by the motion of their lips I knew they were worshipping me. I tried to stop them, but, finding it impossible to do so, I gave up the job and, dragging my aeroplane to a slope favorable to getting a start, rose over their heads and flew away. Some of them gazed after me in wonder, while others kept their faces on the ground.

I circled about, the wonder of various groups of natives. Finally I discerned two lines of men engaged in combat. They were so intent on killing one another that they did not see me till I was nearly over them. Then one after another looked up at me, and, forgetting the human enemy in the monster bird, they took to their heels, gradually disappearing as they obtained cover.

It was now beginning to get dark. I sailed over different parties, but too high to attract their attention. Finally, seeing a dozen men tied to stakes, I descended to get a nearer view. They were evidently prisoners taken in battle, who were to be roasted alive and eaten afterward, for under each was a pile of wood, some of which was already lighted, a small flame curling up near their ankles. It was too dark for them to discover me, and the ground was not favorable to alight-

ing, so, taking up a roman candle, I lighted it, and bombarded them with the balls. Looking up and seeing the dim substance of a huge bird hovering over them, counting fire balls, they fell on their faces. I called to them till they looked up natural being and was about to fly up to heaven with the little one. No one dared oppose me, and, rising in the air, I flew away. When ten minutes later I returned and placed the babe in its mother's arms she fainted for joy. Then I was sure she had expected not to see it again.

Confident as to the safety and docility of my mammoth bird having been established, I was besieged with requests for a ride in the clouds. But it would have been impossible to choose between the applicants, so I was obliged to refuse them all.

Returning to my landing point on the coast, I picked up what I desired to take away with me, then rising, looked out for a ship. Seeing one some forty miles distant, I flew for it. It happened to be an American steamer, and the captain called to me, inviting me to alight. I made a safe descent on to the roomiest part of the deck and at once covered my recently tried devices.

I am now waiting the result of applications I have made for patents and so soon as it seems safe to do so will announce inventions to the world which will make aviation far safer than it has been heretofore.

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lynden or Llyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by a Roman general.

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the lone watches of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams. Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalier will be met at midnight, his bridle rein in one hand and an upraised umbrella in the other. It looks, weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason. They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, lunatics—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness.

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of a Porto Rican, to tempt fate, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day in the Life of an English Lady In 1791.

As for industrious idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Bruin assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and travel all night home. "That," she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush. "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then clambered over the benches and went to Hastings's trial in the hall, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobert's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."

Proving His Authority.

There was an Irish foreman of a gang of laborers who went to any lengths to show his men that he was the real boss. One morning this foreman found that his gang had put a handcar on the track without his orders.

"Who put that han-car-r on the track?" he asked.

"We did, sor," one of the men answered respectfully.

"Well," he said shortly, "take it off ag'in."

The laborers did so with some difficulty.

"Now," said the foreman, "put it on ag'in."

ing, so, taking up a roman candle, I lighted it, and bombarded them with the balls. Looking up and seeing the dim substance of a huge bird hovering over them, wounding fire balls, they fell on their faces.

I called to them till they looked up and made signs to them to unblind their prisoners, which they did, and as soon as the last man was loose I drove the would be devourers away at the point of another roman candle. Then I rose, firing rockets as I ascended with a view to striking terror into them, hoping that they would consider themselves forbidden by the god bird from further returning to their captives.

I then returned to where I had left my supplies and after partaking of a supper rolled myself in my blankets under the shelving rock and went to sleep.

The next morning after taking in fuel and oil I sailed away again. By this time some of the natives had got sufficiently accustomed to me to consider me amenable to attack and made attempts to bring me down. Suddenly while making some adjustments which took my attention a great stone passed within a few feet of my aeroplane. Looking down, I saw a tribe who were working a machine that looked like a Roman catapult. They were directly beneath me, and about to throw another stone. If it hit me it would break my aeroplane. Not daring to risk taking time to rise out of range, I picked up a stick of dynamite and dropped it on them. I saw dust, smoke and fragments, and after the two first had cleared away looked for the natives and their catapult. Where they had stood was a capacious hole in the ground.

Observing a native village beneath me, I determined to descend among them and remain with them till they had got used to me in order that I might commune with them. When yet some distance away I could see them standing together watching my approach. The first evidence of their solicitude was when I came near them and began to descend. Then they all ran away. But when I had alighted I waited patiently till they should come back. Presently I saw heads peeping at me through the long grass. The children came first, the women next and last the men. I worked with them some time in order to establish communication, showing them my wonders. Rigging a telephone, I told a man to go some distance away and I would make his wife talk to him. Having arranged matters for him, I placed a receiver at his ear and, going back to the woman, motioned her to talk through the transmitter. At the first words spoken the man dropped the receiver and looked at me as though he expected to see his wife near him.

Then I established a wireless and placed a man between the two extremes. He could hear the clicking at both, one in keeping with the other. He looked about for some connection, but, finding none, ran away from me and the machine.

To cap the climax I took a little child from its mother's arms and set it beside me in the machine. The mother was frantic, though by signs I endeavored to make her understand that I would bring her child back safely. I think she believed I was a super-

London as it Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lyndon or Lyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troynovant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town. This latter is probably the correct version of the story, if for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said a prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburg. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far."

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shouts preferred."

Preferences.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured." — Mrs. ALVENA SPERLING, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

The Canton Man

A Tale of South China

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Dr. Osmond sat on the veranda of his bungalow trying to be content in the knowledge that his enforced rest from the daily grind of his Hong-kong practice was proving very beneficial to his health as well as to his projected book on "Chinese Temple Ruins." And because the famous Len-chuou temple ruins were in the neighborhood he had gone no farther north than the coast town of Ko-Ngan.

Within the jasmine draped veranda all was dark save the red glow of the doctor's cigar. Overhead the great punkah fan swayed to and fro, stirring the air into refreshing coolness.

A sampan bumped against the little landing, and there came the slap-slap of bare running feet on the ground outside, then the gate in the garden wall creaked slowly on its hinges, a the doctor sharply. "Who is it?"

"The great doctor's contemptible servant whose honored father"—the while died away in a choking sob.

Dr. Osmond half rose to his feet. "You are the Canton man who called me to town yesterday? Your father is worse?"

"Nay, the great foreign doctor cured my revered father of a fever," whined the Chinese. "Newt's eye and an owl's membrane were of no avail, but the black medicine of the foreign land brought my parent to life."

"I am grateful to the great physician. I would reward him generously for saving my father's life. I am a poor man, but I have knowledge that may repay the great lord for his goodness," whined the Canton man.

"I want no reward, my man. I am glad your father is better. Do you want some more of the black medicine?"

"No more medicine is needed. My father is well and happy. The foreign doctor is interested in the ruins of the temple in the walnut grove?"

"Yes."

"He has perhaps wondered what became of the sacred image of the Goddess of Mercy whose fame is on every tongue, but whose face has never been looked upon since the earth dragon shook down the temple a century ago?"

"By Jove, yes." The doctor leaned forward eagerly.

"He has perhaps heard of the priceless jewels hung upon the sacred form—offerings from royal pilgrims of many ages. He has heard of the great emerald that a son of heaven took from his royal brow and placed in the hand of the Goddess of Mercy? The great foreign physician would like to see all these splendors and perhaps choose some for himself?"

"Your story sounds incredible, and yet—can you take me to the ruins now?"

"Yes. It is but a few steps to the walnut grove."

"Wait, then, while I make ready." Still skeptical as to the truth of the native's story, Dr. Osmond equipped himself with cap and stout oaken stick from the rack. In the breast pocket of his white coat was another weapon without which he never traveled in this country of doubtful friends—small and heavy and shining and very deadly looking when one faced its muzzle.

The doctor lighted a paper lantern for the Canton man, and this, augmented by the white triangular ray from his electric pocket lamp, lighted their way through the garden to a gate in the south wall that gave into a tangled field.

On the farther side of the field the walnut grove loomed blackly.

Under the trees the doctor and his guide picked their way among the crumbling columns and scattered stones of the fallen temple.

Suddenly the Chinese paused and swung his lantern about with a swift circular movement, lighting up heaps of broken rocks and columns, rough and forbidding, just as they had fallen. He beckoned to Osmond, and the latter bent his back and followed his guide through an opening among the debris that grew larger as they advanced. The ground sloped suddenly, and he felt several stone steps beneath his feet. He passed within the Chinese lifted a slab of stone and then another and motioned him forward.

"If the great lord will go on ahead, his servant will arrange the opening that we may have air."

Nothing loath, Osmond moved down three shallow steps and found himself in a small chamber choked with debris. Before he could look around there was of a very flimsy plot. His threats and commands only brought forth insults from the lips of the Chinese.

"Ah—foreign devil doctor—you cast the evil eye upon my father, and he died this morning! He is dead, and the black medicine killed him! Ai—ai—ai!" screamed the furious man through the crack between the stones.

Osmond placed the muzzle of his revolver to the crack and said, "Lift this stone or I will kill you!" And when there was no reply save a wild sobbing laugh the Englishman pulled the trigger.

Above the noise of the explosion the doctor heard a shriek of pain that diminished as the Canton man fled from the scene, leaving him alone in the underground prison house with little chance of escape.

After a vain endeavor to lift the stones that walled him in he retraced his way down the steps and turned the rays of his lamp about the chamber.

The image of the Goddess of Mercy, filling two-thirds of the space, was propped slantingly against one wall, revealing tarnished splendors of paint and gilding; the staring, supercilious eyes were of painted porcelain, but nowhere was there a trace of the precious gems with which tradition had loaded the image.

There was a movement on the outstretched hand of the Goddess of Mercy, and Osmond started violently; a small venomous snake inched its way up the arm and disappeared over the shoulder. He turned the light rapidly here and there, and then he understood the full sweetness of the Canton man's revenge, while the skin about his temples seemed to shrink with terror.

The rays of the lamp fell on countless writhing forms of serpents.

The flashing of the light seemed to rouse the reptiles to greater anger; they hissed loudly until he snapped it out, but the horror of total darkness overcame this other fear, and he turned it on again, the lense fixed on the fallen image.

If he got out alive he would have rich material for his book. This underground chamber could tell him many things once rid of its occupants. But he would never get out alive, so it would be of no use to him! He laughed bitterly, and the sound echoed weirdly among the rocks. There was a quick rustling—and the serpents had disappeared!

If he could keep them away by shouting he would do so, and at the same time he might be heard. But that was absurd, for all his native servants were ardent cowards, and there was no foreigner nearer than the town. All at once he remembered that two officers from the British cruiser in the harbor were to spend the evening with him. Might they wonder at his absence and look for him? He, who was never a praying man, called upon God to send his friends that way. Then he lifted his voice and shouted their names again and again.

By and by when he was tired silence reigned in the chamber; one by one the snakes came back and stared at him with idles watching eyes. He gazed at the porcelain orbs of the Goddess of Mercy and thought how little mercy there was in her disciple, the Canton man!

The serpents were becoming obnoxious again, and this time he pulled out his revolver and aimed at the tiny viper in the outstretched hand. There was the sharp tinkle of shattered porcelain and when the smoke settled down to the floor the Goddess of Mercy still thrust forth an arm, but the hand was broken; on the floor among the crushed fingers lay the straight slim body of the dead viper.

The Partisan

Being Captured, Death Stared Him and His Men in the Face.

By SARAH BRYCE VAUGHAN.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

During the American civil war there were three different classes of combatants on the southern side—the army, the partisan and the guerrilla. The army and the guerrilla lasted throughout the four years' fight; the partisan was rare except at the beginning of the war, and, though he kept up an irregular warfare to the end, he eventually became an enlisted soldier.

Young Carroll Bates of Tennessee was in the spring of 1862 a leader of one of these partisan bands. He had no commission from the Confederate government, nor were his men enlisted. The consequence was that if captured they were amenable to the same treatment as the guerrillas, which was to be hanged or shot. Bates' command numbered about thirty men, most of them of the better class, and the work they laid out for themselves was the annoyance of the Federal armies. They would interrupt communications by cutting bridges, tearing up tracks, setting fire to storehouses containing army supplies—indeed, all such work as would harass the enemies of the Confederacy. Their acts would have been legitimate had they been mustered into the service, but as citizens they were engaged in an unlawful warfare.

Bates was of that type of man of whom General N. B. Forrest was the principal. No bridge guard knew when the young partisan would swoop down on them, make them prisoners or drive them away and set fire to the bridge that had been placed in their charge. Wagon trains unless under charge of a large guard, even far in rear of the Federal front, were never safe from capture, and if captured they and the supplies they contained were burned. So bold and so annoying were Bates' men that the general in command of the Federal troops in the district he was constantly raiding sent Captain Coleman with two companies of cavalry to capture or disperse his band.

One evening Bates stopped at the house of a Union farmer and demanded supplies for his men and forage for his horses. The southerners having been supplied had not long left the farm when Captain Coleman and his troops rode up from a different direction. Upon the captain asking for information of Bates' command the farmer said:

"They have just left here. If you are after them you'll find them near here tonight. Bates' girl lives a few miles down the road, and he's sure to go to see her this evening. I'll show you the roads by which you can approach the house from different directions and surround it."

The offer was gladly accepted, and when it was quite dark the farmer sent one of his boys to reconnoiter the partisans. It was learned that the band was bivouacked in the yard of the house of one Colonel Payton, commanding a Confederate regiment in east Tennessee, whose daughter Dolly was engaged to Carroll Bates. About 10 o'clock a hundred Federal cavalrymen, converging on the the doctor's cigar. Overhead the green punkah fan swayed to and fro, stirring the air into refreshing coolness.

A sampan bumped against the little landing, and there came the slap-slap of bare running feet on the ground outside, then the gate in the garden wall creaked slowly on its hinges, a shadowy form flitted up the path between the oleanders and flung itself in a crumpled heap at the foot of the steps and somebody's long cue struck the floor like the snap of a whiplash.

"Well, what's the matter?" asked three shallow steps and found himself in a small chamber choked with debris. Before he could look around there was the dull clang of falling stone, and he rushed up the steps only to knock his head against the stone that covered the entrance.

It did not need the derisive cries of the Canton man to reveal to Dr. Osmond that he had been the victim out his revolver and aimed at the wuy viper in the outstretched hand. There was the sharp tinkle of shattered porcelain and when the smoke settled down to the floor the Goddess of Mercy still thrust forth an arm, but the hand was broken; on the floor among the crushed fingers lay the straight slim body of the dead viper.

Osmond leaned forward and peered at the half palm extended toward him. His eyes distended and his breath came sharply. The hand was hollow, and poised on the broken edge was something that gleamed strangely in the lamplight! The emperor had been no fool who had placed his offering within the band of the Goddess of Mercy! The doctor stretched forth a hand and, with unbelieving eyes, touched the sparkling green stone; it fell into his palm and nestled there, while he gloated over it. Reaction came when he remembered that he was a prisoner until death!

He shouted again and again. He lifted his weapon and shot the porcelain eyes from the staring image. He shot at the other hand and saw that it was wood. He shot at the hissing serpents and drove them away from the stone steps, and then he mounted the steps and tried to throw a flash of light through the crack of the flagstones.

At last there was a distant shout—an English shout—and he shouted in return; he reloaded his weapon and fired recklessly through the cracks and he flashed his light repeatedly. The shouts grew nearer, and he recognized the voices of the naval visitors he had expected.

When they found him his own eager hands helped to lift the stones of his prison. Briefly they told of their visit to the bungalow and their wonder at his absence, their natural suspicion and their search for him. In turn he told his story, and they did not believe he had found the emerald until he displayed it to their wondering eyes.

Back in the bungalow Osmond asked for the time. "It must be near morning," he said.

"Ten o'clock," remarked Lieutenant Breer, with a glance at the white hair that sprinkled Osmond's head—it had been jet black the day before!

"And it was about 9 when I left the bungalow," said Osmond briefly.

After that Dr. Osmond went back to Hongkong and plunged into his neglected practice. "I came back to get rested," he explained, but he lost interest in the ruins of Chinese temples, and whenever he was asked why he merely looked at a gleaming emerald on his little finger and answered vaguely, "Because!"

Great Scheme.

"What do you do," asked the one who had been married only a few months, "when your husband comes home late at night?"

"I pretend not to notice that it's late, and pretty soon he asks me if I wouldn't like to go to the theater or somewhere tomorrow afternoon."

Startling Encouragement.

"Was Amelia's father encouraging when you went to him to ask him for her hand?"

"Not very. He asked me to put the proposal in writing, so I couldn't back out, as all the others did."

sent one of his boys to reconnoiter the partisans. It was learned that the band was bivouacked in the yard of the house of one Colonel Payton, commanding a Confederate regiment in east Tennessee, whose daughter Dolly was engaged to Carroll Bates. About 10 o'clock a hundred Federal cavalrymen, converging, encircled the house and captured the entire band. The men were in the yard, most of them asleep, but Bates was in the house with his fiancée.

At the time of the capture Dolly Payton was begging her lover to obtain a commission from the Confederate government and thus avoid certain death in case of capture. Bates argued that by doing so he would become a very small part of a large army and could not be as useful to the cause. She was holding up to him the horror she would experience in case he were captured when they were startled by shots without. The door was thrown open, and Captain Coleman stepped in with a drawn revolver in each hand, confronting Bates, around whom the girl had thrown her arms.

Bates, seeing that he was caught, endeavored to unwind Dolly's arms, but she would not. Coleman, touched by the scene, stood waiting, waving back his men who had followed him into the house. Finally Bates unwound the arms that encircled him, and the girl fell to the floor in a faint. Coleman motioned Bates to take her up. He did so and placed her on the sofa on which the two had been sitting. By this time members of the family appeared, took charge of Dolly, and Bates was taken outside. The thirty partisans were in charge of three times their number of Union cavalrymen and escape was hopeless.

HE FEARED BLOOD POISON

But Zam-Buk Saved His Thumb.

Once again a case is reported in which the popular balm Zam-Buk has saved a worker from the terrible effects of blood-poisoning. Alfred Hy. Orth, of Shipley, Ont., says: "While at work I had the misfortune to run a rusty nail under my thumb nail, to the depth of about one and a half inches. The pain was terrible and what I feared was that the nail, being so dirty and rusty, would set up festering and blood-poison. I knew from previous experience how good Zam-Buk was, so I cleaned the thumb, melted a little Zam-Buk, and ran it into the wound. The result was wonderful! It soothed the pain and the thumb actually did not swell. Zam-Buk kept away all inflammation. I was able to go on with my work all the time, and in a few days the thumb was as good as ever. A balm which can do this should be in every working man's home."

Zam-Buk is the finest of "insurance" for all workers. Its antiseptic power is so great that no disease germ can live in it; and if immediately applied to a sore or injury, or disease patch, all danger of blood-poisoning is averted.

Being composed of pure vegetable essences, Zam-Buk is an ideal balm for babies and young children, and mothers will find it far superior to the ordinary salves, some of which contain harmful mineral poison, rancid animal fats, etc.

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for ulcers, abscesses, eczema, ringworm, blood-poison, scaly sores, chapped hands, cold sores, inflamed patches, bad leg, varicose veins and ulcers, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin diseases and injuries. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers at 50c a box, 3 for $1.25. Post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Avoid harmful imitations and substitutes.

"I FEEL IT MY DUTY To Give You a Statement In Regard To 'Fruit-a-tives'"

HARDWICKE, MIRAMICHI, N.B., Jan. 17th. 1910.

"I feel it my duty to give to you and the world an unsolicited statement in respect to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered with for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease, and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit, and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets but nothing did me any good.

I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by New Brunswick's 'Grand Old Man', the Hon. John Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-men. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered from for so many years. My general health is once more excellent and I cannot say too much to express my thanks for the great benefits derived from taking 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" is not gotten up by druggists or expert chemists—who know nothing about disease and the needs of the human body—but is the scientific discovery of a well known physician, and is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. Soc. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

entered the house and asked for writing material. He desired to send a courier to his general with a report of the capture and to ask for instructions. While he was writing Dolly Payton, white as a cloth, came in.

"What will you do with them?" she asked.

"That is for the general to decide."

"I know what he will decide. He will order you to shoot them all."

There was no reply to this.

"And why will he shoot them?" the girl went on, striving to control herself with a view to saving them. "Because they are fighting as citizens and not as soldiers. On this account they must suffer the punishment of these bands of robbers who will murder and pillage our people as well as yours."

The captain was attentive, but he had nothing to say. How could he argue a matter of justice with a girl whose lover he expected to be ordered to shoot in cold blood?

"Guerrillas are monsters," she continued, "and should be shot whenever captured. At least I would not move a hand to save them. But these boys are gentlemen's sons. They are fighting for a cause which they consider to be just. Their leader, Carroll Bates, comes of one of the oldest families in Tennessee."

"And a brave man," the captain put in.

"Yes, a brave man. Again and again with his handful of men he has ridden many miles in the rear of your lines and attacked guards much larger than his force. His only mistake has been that he is not a soldier in the army. Consider that these boys are full of zeal. They have not stopped to think that they should make war in a certain fashion. They love a life of freedom and dread the restraint of the military service."

remained only a short while. The strain was great, and she was better able to bear it with her mother.

As the afternoon wore on Dolly, who was becoming uncontrollable, broke away and went to a window, where she could see a bit of road several miles distant. A cavalryman was coming leisurely. He was a machine to carry orders or be shot as the case demanded without knowledge, except that he was doing what was expected of him. Coleman, hearing Dolly wildly calling on the messenger to "Come, for heaven's sake come; I shall die!" mounted his horse and rode out to get the dispatch.

When the captain on his return galloped up to the house Dolly stood on the balcony, her lover beside her, her eyes wild with suspense. He waved the paper over his head to signal "life" instead of "death," and Dolly fell limp into the hands of the man whose life was all the world to her. Then Coleman ordered the captives to be brought up before the house, and he read aloud the general's order:

The request of Miss Dolly Payton that her lover and his men be not executed as guerrillas on condition that they fight no more against the United States except as regularly commissioned or enlisted men in the Confederate armies is granted.

Several of the men thus reprieved fainted; a number staggered as if drunk; the rest broke into a wild cheer.

Later the partisans, having been paroled, went in a body to thank the girl who had turned a certain death into life. Then they scattered, most of them going to their homes.

SOLD THE WORLD OVER.

FIRES THAT ARE ASLEEP.

A Great Range of Volcanoes in the Heart of Africa.

It is not very generally known that right in the heart of Africa at the southern end of Lake Albert Edward is a great range of volcanoes. They are eight in number, and, though it is true that, unlike Rukenzor, they carry no permanent snow, the highest peak is over 14,000 feet in height. These volcanoes are particularly interesting on account of their comparative newness. Running through the middle of Africa there is a trench many hundreds miles long, in which lie the great lakes Albert, Albert Edward, Kivu and Tanganyika.

Not very many thousands of years ago the volcanoes, generally called Mfumbiro, burst up through the middle of this trench and made a dam across it, with the result that some of the water which formerly flowed into Lake Albert Edward and so into the Nile was cut off and a lake was formed behind the dam. As times went on the waters in the lake which is now called Kivu rose higher and higher until, not being able to flow over the barrier of the volcanoes, they formed the Rusizi river, which runs the other way into Tanganyika, about a hundred miles distant. Of the eight volcanoes only two show signs of activity at the present time in the form of thin wisps of steam which may occasionally be seen, but a vast plain of lava, with its midst, showed where a formidable eruption had taken place only two or three years before our visit. There are hot springs scattered here and there, and we felt slight shocks of earthquakes once or twice, so it is not safe to say that the Mfumbiro volcanoes are extinct.—Wide World Magazine.

A RUNAWAY HORSE.

Impossible For Him to Take the Bit Between His Teeth.

The runaway horse in story books, as in most of the veracious and detailed accounts given in the daily press, invariably "takes the bit between his teeth" as a preliminary measure. It would be interesting to know how he does this. He obviously cannot get it between his molar teeth (grinders) unless both his cheeks are slit up from the corners of his mouth, and if the cheek straps be the right length it is equally impossible for him to get it lines and attacked guards much larger than his force. His only mistake has been that he is not a soldier in the army. Consider that these boys are full of zeal. They have not stopped to think that they should make war in a certain fashion. They love a life of freedom and dread the restraint of the military service."

"That's the kind for soldiers," added Coleman, "once they are trained."

"When you surprised us tonight what do you suppose I was doing? I was trying to persuade Carroll to take his men into the regular Confederate service. Ever since he has been a partisan leader I have feared this result. When I last saw him I resolved that when he came again I would not cease my efforts with him till I had secured his consent. Had you been an hour later I would have gained it before you arrived."

The girl's able pleading for her lover and his men, whom she never failed to include with him, had its effect on the captain. The strain on his heart was greater than the strain had been on his nerves on any field of battle. He wished that he were the general, that he might grant this girl's request, that he might spare the lives of these boys, some of whom were barely sixteen, many of whom were not twenty-one, and none but a few years past their majority. Doubtless many of them were loved by some girl. A case of boys and girls on the one hand and grim death on the other!

After the girl's last words, seeing that Coleman was thinking, Dolly refrained from speaking. It was a picture—the young man in blue; a girl whose lover's life hung in the balance, watching intently to catch a word of hope from the enemy. Finally Coleman rose:

"Sit here," he said, "and write your request, re-enforced with your argument, and I will send it with my report to the general."

With the light of a newborn hope in her eye Dolly obeyed. What she wrote was not expressed as the captain's report—indeed, it formed a marked contrast with that report—but there was plenty of reason for the request, and Dolly's heart was in her argument. It needed nothing to send it to the heart of the man it was intended for, inasmuch as it was that of a young girl asking for her lover's life.

When she had finished it she arose and handed it to the captain, who, without reading it, placed it in an envelope and, taking it outside, gave it to one of his men, with orders to take it to the general and bring an answer.

It was fifteen miles to camp, and the greater part of the day must be consumed before a reply could be received. Captain Coleman could form no opinion of what the answer would be, except that it would be either an order to shoot every man he had captured at once or that the boon was granted. He knew that the general was a kind hearted man, but he did not know whether he would consider himself at liberty to spare what the law of war condemned or if he saw justice in Dolly Peyton's request whether he would consider that the interests of the Union cause and the army defending it demanded the death of the partisans.

Dolly Peyton remained during the day in care of her mother and others of the family. Coleman, understanding the agony of suspense she suffered, went to Bates and told him that he was permitted to go to his betrothed. Bates thanked him, went to Dolly, but

THE SECRET OF HER POWER,

"Decidedly," reflects Blanford. "Lawrence must have looked too often at Mme. Sabaroff. Sabaroff is dead, isn't he?" he asks, aloud. "You know I have been out of society for a year; the whole map of Europe gets altered in one's absence."

"Sabaroff was shot in a duel four years ago," replies Mrs. Curzon; "a duel about her."

"What a fortunate woman! To get rid of a husband, and to get rid of him in such interesting circumstances!"

"That depends. With her it resulted in her exile from court."

"Oh, to be sure, when Russians are naughty they are sent to live on their estates, as riotous children are dismissed to their nursery. Was she compromised, then?"

"Very much compromised, and both men were killed, for the adversary of Sabaroff had been wounded mortally, when, with an immense effort, he fired and shot the prince through the lungs."

"A pretty little melodrama. Who was the opponent?"

"Count Lustoff, a colonel of the guard. I wonder you did not hear of it; it made a stir at the time."

"I may have heard; when one doesn't know the people concerned, no massacre, even of the innocents, makes any impression on one. And the result was that the lady had to leave the imperial court?"

"Yes; they do draw a line there." Blanford laughs; it tickles his fancy to hear Mrs. Wentworth Curzon condemning by implication the laxity of the court of St. James.

"They can't send us to our estates," he replies; "the lands are so small and the railways are so close. Else it would have a very good effect if all our naughty people could be shut up inside their own gates, with nobody to speak to but the steward and the rector. Can you imagine anything that would more effectively contribute to correct manners and morals? But how very desolate London would look!"

"Why does she take this absent woman's character away?" thinks Blanford, with a sense of irritation. "I will trust the Babe's instincts sooner than hers."

CHAPTER VI.

The very bachelor rooms at Surrenden are conducive to reverie and indolence, cozily comfortable, and full of attentions for the guest's and of lounging chair. "Reading made easy," somebody calls it. But there is little reading done either in it or in the big library. Blanford, when he goes there, finds himself usually alone, and can commune as he chooses with Latin philosophy and Gaulois wit.

"You used to read, George!" he says to his host in expostulation.

"Yes, I used—ages ago," says Usk, with a yawn.

Blanford looks at him with curiosity.

"I can understand a man who has never read," he replies, "but I cannot understand a man losing the taste for reading if he has ever had it. One can dwell contented in Boeotia if one have never been out of it, but to go back to Boeotia after living in Attica—"

"It's one's life does it."

"What life? One has the life one wishes."

"That's the sort of thing a man says who hasn't married."

"My dear George! you cannot pretend your wife would prevent your reading Latin and Greek, or even Sanscrit. I am sure she would much sooner you read them all—well—than do other things you do."

"I don't say she would prevent me," returns the lord of Surrenden, with some crossness, "but it's the kind of life one gets into that kills all that sort of thing in one. There is no time for it."

"I keep out of the life; why don't you?"

"There's no time for anything," says Usk, gloomily. "There's such heaps of things to see to, and such numbers of places to go to, and then one lives au jour le jour, and one gets into the swim and goes on, and then there's the shooting, and when there isn't the shooting there's the season and the racing."

"I lead my own life," Blanford remarks.

"Yes, but you don't mind being called eccentric."

"No, I don't mind it in the least. If they say nothing worse of me I am grateful."

"But you couldn't do it if you had all my places and all my houses and all my brothers and all my family—you're a free agent. I declare that all the time goes away with me in such a crowd of worries that I've hardly a second to smoke a cigarette in any peace!"

Blanford smiles.

"Once a scholar always a scholar, it seems to me," says Blanford. "I could as soon live without air as without books," and he smiles faintly.

They both look at a lady in one of the distant alleys, walking between the high, green walls. She is dressed in some soft, cream-colored stuff with quantities of lace. She carries a sunshade of the same hue. She has a tall cane in her other hand. On either side of her are the Ladies Alexandra and Hermione, and before her gambols in his white sailor clothes, with his blue silk stockings and his silver buckled shoes, the Babe.

"Decidedly the Sabaroff," says Usk. "Won't you come and speak to her?"

"With pleasure," says Blanford. "Even if the Babe brains me with the cane!"

He looks very well as he walks bareheaded over the grass and along the green alley; he wears a loose, brown velvet coat, admirably made, and brown breeches and stockings; his legs are as well made as his coat; the sun shines on his curling hair; there is a degage, picturesque, debonnaire, yet distinguished look about him which pleases the eyes of Xenia Sabaroff, as they watch him draw near.

"Who is that person with your father?" she asks. The children tell her, all speaking at once.

She recognizes the name; she has heard of him often in the world, and has read those books which praise solitude and a dinner of herbs. "I doubt his having been alone very long, however," she reflects, as she looks at him. A certain unlikeness in him to Englishmen in general some women who are fond of him fancifully trace to the fact that the first Blanford was a Venetian, who fled for his life from the republic, and made himself conspicuous and acceptable for his talents alike as a lutist and a swordsman at the court of Henry II. "It can't count; it's so very far away," he himself objects; but perhaps it does count. Of all things ineffaceable the marks of race are the most indelible.

"An interesting woman," he thinks now, as he exchanges with the Princess Sabaroff the usual compliments and commonplaces of a presentation. "Russians are always interesting; they are the only women about whom you feel that you know very little; they are the only women who, in this chatterbox of a generation, tout en dehors as it is, preserve some of the vague charm of mystery—and what a charm that is!"

BIG BUSINESS IN 1910.

The year 1910 promises to be one of the most prosperous in Canada's history. Year after year, the same story has been told about increased prosperity of Canada and there seems to be no limit to the improvement in Business conditions and increase in stability of our large Financial Institutions.

The Traders Bank of Canada have recently issued a statement showing the results of their business for the first six months in 1910. Up to June 30th, their total deposits have increased to $33,500,000.00—their total Assets to $44,500,000.00, an increase over 1909 for the same period of $3,687,000.00, in total Deposits and $4,537,000.00 in total Assets.

In addition to this very favorable Financial statement the Traders Bank also state that eleven Branches have been opened since the end of the year which brings their total number of Branches in Canada up to 112.

MEATS.

Lamb Chops en Casserole. — Put into frying pan one teaspoon butter and one of lard. When melted and hot slice into it three small onions, and let them brown on both sides. Remove onions, and into the pan put eight lamb loin chops, cut one-half inch thick, and trimmed of all fat. Sear on each side and arrange in bottom of casserole. Over the chops put first the onions that were fried, then two good sized tomatoes, sliced, and three medium sized new carrots, cubed in inch pieces. Now add three good sized potatoes that have been cut into small squares and boiled for a few minutes in salted water. Pepper to taste and cover with the water in which potatoes were boiled. Put in oven and cook one hour. When ready to serve pour off the liquid, thicken and return it to casserole. An excellent dish and inexpensive.

Jellied Veal Loaf.—For these warm days, when meat is hard to prepare and have it appetizing, I have found this recipe most excellent, especially as it can be prepared in the morning, ready for 6 o'clock dinner, or on Saturday for Sunday's dinner. Four pounds veal stew with joints; after washing place in stew kettle, cover with boiling water, and cook slowly three hours or more, until meat is tender. When half done add one small onion cut fine, one tablespoonful salt, and enough pepper to suit individual taste. When veal is done remove from the fire, but leave meat in the liquid until cool enough to put through food chopper; after it is cut place meat in narrow bread pan and pour the liquid over it. Stir well, then smooth on top. It will jelly and makes a delicious cold meat. D.

Chicken Salad.—An attractive way of serving chicken salad is to place it in a ring of ham jelly. Two cupfuls of the salad should be poured in the ring of jelly; after it is placed on a platter. To make the dish attractive the jelly should rest on lettuce or watercress. For the ham jelly whip one-half pint of thick cream until stiff, stir in a cupful of aspic jelly, cool a little and add a jar of potted ham. By adding a few drops of fruit syrup it will make the jelly pink.

Chipped Beef with Mushrooms.—One-half pound of chipped beef, cut in small pieces, soak in cold water fifteen minutes, squeeze dry in a cloth, and mix thoroughly in plenty of flour, well peppered. Place two small tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; in the butter have a piece of onion which has been cooked ten minutes, take out onion, put in the floured beef, and let simmer over the fire three minutes, stirring constantly; add three dozen tiny button mushrooms or one and one-half dozen larger cut in halves, and one and one-half cups of milk. Stir constantly until it starts to boil. Serve on six slices of toast. This can be prepared very nicely in a chafing dish.

Mock Duck.—Take a round beefsteak, salt and pepper either side; prepare bread or crackers with oysters or without, as for stuffing a turkey; lay your stuffing on meat, saw up, and roast about an hour; and if you do not see the wings and legs you will think you have roast duck.

Meat Loaf.—When making a meat loaf place three hard boiled eggs in the middle, end to end, so when you slice the meat a slice of

CHAPTER VI.

The very bachelor rooms at Surrenden are conducive to reverie and indolence, cozily comfortable, and full of attentions for the guest's bien etre, among which there is a printed paper which is always laid on the dressing-table in every room at this house; it contains the latest telegrams of public news, which come every afternoon from a London news agency.

"I dare say, to the political fellows they are delightful," reflects Blanford, as he glances down the lines; "but to me, they unpleasantly recall an uncomfortable world. I don't dine the worse, certainly, for knowing that there is a revolution in Patagonia or an earthquake in Bolivia, but neither do I dine the better for being told that the French government is destitute of all moderate perfections in favor of immoderate ones. It is very interesting, no doubt, but it doesn't interest me, and I think the possession of these fresh scraps of prosaic news spoils dinner conversation."

"Children should be taught to talk," he observes one day to Lady Usk, "and they should not be allowed to be slovenly in their speech any more than in their dress. You would not let them enter your presence with unbrushed hair, but you let them use any bald, slangy, or inappropriate words which come uppermost to them. There is so much in the choice of words. A beautiful voice is a delicious thing, but it avails little without the usage of apt and graceful phrases. Did you ever hear Mrs. Norton sustain a discussion or relate an anecdote? It was like listening to perfect phrasing in music. When she died, the art of conversation died with her."

"We are always in such a hurry," says Lady Usk, which is her habitual explanation of anything in which her generation is at fault. "And hurry is always vulgar, you know, as you said the other day; it cannot help itself."

"You are a purist, my dear Blanford," says Lady Dolgelly, who nates him.

"Purity, daughter of sweet virtues mild," murmurs Blanford. "Alas! my dear ladies, I cannot hope that she dwells with me in any form. When she has a home in your own gentle breasts, who can hope that she would ever take shelter in a man's?"

"How impertinent and how nasty he is!" thinks the lady, and she detests him a little more cordially than before. There is not a very good feeling toward him among any of the ladies at Surrenden; he does not make love to them; he does not endeavor to alter existing arrangements in his favor; it is generally felt that he would not care to do so. What can you expect from a man who sits half his days in a library?

It is in the smaller library adjacent, filled with modern volumes, that 5 o'clock tea is always to be had, with all the abundant demoralizing abominations of caviare kummel, etc. It is a gay room, with dussus des portes after Watteau, and every variety of couch with me in such a crowd of worries that I've hardly a second to smoke a cigarette in any peace." Blanford smiles.

"Once a scholar always a scholar, it seems to me," says Blanford. "I could as soon live without air as without books," and he quotes Cowley—

"Books should as business entertain the light."

"You don't continue the quotation," says Usk, with a smile.

"Autres temps autres moeurs," says Blanford. He laughs and gets up; it is four in the afternoon; the delicious green garden is lying bathed in warm, amber light; one of the peacocks is turning round slowly with all his train displayed; he seems never to tire of turning round.

"How exactly that bird is like some politicians one could name," says Blanford. "Do you know that this charming garden always reminds me of St. Hubert's Lea, our west garden, I mean? I think the same man must have laid them out. Is it not Bulwer Lytton who says that so long as one has a garden one always has one room which is roofed by heaven?"

"A heaven mitigated by gardeners' wages very considerably mitigated," says Usk.

"You are cynical, George, and your mind is running on pounds, shillings, and pence—an offense against nature on such a day as this. There is nothing so demoralizing as to think of money."

"To have debts and not to think of 'em is more so; and Boom—"

"Sell something of his that he likes very much, to pay his debts; that's the only way I know of to check a boy at the onset. Your father did it with me the very first time I owed twenty pounds, and he read me a lesson I never forgot. I have been eternally obliged to him ever since."

"What did he sell?"

"My cob, a cob I adored. I wept like a child, but he didn't see my tears. What I saved up next half to trace out that cob and buy him back at twice his value, what I denied myself to make up the money, nobody would believe; and the beast wasn't easy to find, some dealer had taken him over to Ireland."

"That could be done with you," says Usk, gloomily. "It would be no use to do it with Boom; his mother would buy him some other horse the next day. You've no chance to bring up a boy decently, if he's got a mother."

"The reverse is the received opinion of mankind," said Blanford, "but I believe there's something to be said for your view. No end of women have no idea of bringing up their children, and when they ought to be ordered a flogging they fondle them."

"Dolly does," says her husband. "What's a woman's notion of a horse? That he must have slender legs, a coat like satin, and be fed on apples and sugar; still, they saw his mouth till he half dislocates his neck and tear his ribs open with their spur. They're just as unreasonable with their children."

"Who is that woman?" says Blanford, making a step across the window and into the garden. "Now I am perfectly certain that is Mme. Sabaroff, without your saying so."

"Then I needn't say so," replies Usk. "I wonder when she came? They didn't expect her till tomorrow."

Assets. Deposits and $4,537,000.00 in total Assets.

In addition to this very favorable financial statement the Traders Bank also state that eleven Branches have been opened since the end of the year which brings their total number of Branches in Canada up to 112.

Perhaps not one of the least reasons for the great success with the Traders Bank of Canada during the last three years has been the progressive, energetic management of this well-established Bank. Progressive methods alive with conservative, sound Banking principals that have done much to develop this country.

TASTY DESSERTS.

Stuffed Cherries. — Take one pound of fresh candied cherries, open carefully, and place in center of each a filbert nut meat. Press into shape and roll in powdered sugar. These are dainty and especially appropriate to serve with a birthday luncheon.

Pieplant Marmalade.—Cut pieplant very fine and to each cupful add the pulp and juice of one orange and one teaspoonful of the grated rind, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one and one-half cups of sugar. Let stand until sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly until transparent, then add one cupful of blanched almonds, cut in pieces. Boil up once and put in glasses.

NATURALLY.

When going away from home, or at any change of habitat, he is a wise man who numbers among his belongings a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. He then has a standard remedy at hand with which to cope with the disorder, and forearmed he can successfully fight the ailment and subdue it.

THE END IN SIGHT.

A stranger entered a church in the middle of the sermon and seated himself in the back pew. After a while he began to fidget. Leaning over to the white-haired man at his side, evidently an old member of the congregation, he whispered: "How long has he been preaching?"

"Thirty or forty years, I think," the old man answered. "I don't know exactly."

"I'll stay then," decided the stranger. "He must be nearly done."

Little Girl—"You needn't brag. We've got a baby at our house, too." "Yes, but yours is a last year's baby. Ours is the very latest style."

SUMMER TIME A

TIME OF DANGER

Summer time is a time of danger to all babies—but more especially to those living in the towns and cities where the heat is so excessive as to make it almost impossible to keep baby's food in proper condition. It is then that the little one suffers from these stomach and bowel troubles that carry off so many precious little lives. During the summer the mother must be especially careful to keep baby's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine will be of such great aid to mothers in summer as Baby's Own Tablets. These little Tablets never fail to regulate the bowels; sweeten the stomach and make baby well and happy. Mrs. D. Devlin, St. Sylvester East, Que., says: "I think Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine for little ones for stomach and bowel troubles and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Emu and Its Eggs.

The emu is the largest bird of the Australian bush and, next to the ostrich, the largest of existing birds, the cassowary, also a native of Queensland, coming next. The emu scrapes a shallow pit in the ground for its nest and lays from nine to thirteen eggs. The eggs are five inches in length. These are hatched by the cock bird, the period of incubation lasting from seventy to eighty days. The young at birth are striped longitudinally with dark markings on a light ground. They can run with great speed very shortly after being hatched. The eggs of the emu are very rich in flavor, too rich to be eaten alone. The flesh is dark colored and oily and is only eaten by the aboriginals.

Cheese Improves With Age.

Newspapers report that in the Alpine regions of the Swiss cantons of Vaud and Valais cheese makers will keep their products for years. They assert that cheese improves with age. At Les Ormonts, in the canton of Vaud, it is customary to make special cheese for certain family feasts. They are tagged with explanatory labels and eaten several years later at other feasts, or even at funerals. Often such cheeses are bequeathed from one generation to another as family souvenirs. Recently at Les Ormonts in a concealed shelter there was discovered a cheese dating from 1785. It was as hard as a rock and had to be cut with a saw. It is reported to have tasted good.

STICK TO THE GOOD OLD HORSE REMEDY.

It is a wise plan for all horse owners to keep some well known, tried remedy on the stable shelf.

Kendall's Spavin Cure is one of the best all round horse remedies that was ever compounded. The fact that it is so old a remedy is greatly in its favor. It is proof positive of its efficiency. All old time horse owners know Kendall's Spavin Cure and most of them use it. They would not have continued to use it for upwards of forty years if it had not proven to its legion of users that it does cure the things for which it is recommended, namely: spavins, ringbones, curbs, splints, wire cuts, swellings, sprains, lameness, etc., the ailments that are always and everywhere common to horses.

Ask your druggist for Kendall's "Treatise on the Horse," or write to Dr. B. J. Kendall, Enosburg Falls, Vt.

CAKE.

Chocolate Layer Cake.—Beat to a cream one-half cup of butter and a cup of sugar. When this is light beat in a little at a time one-half cup of milk and a teaspoonful of vanilla; beat the whites of four eggs to a stiff froth. Sift together a teaspoon baking powder and two scant cupfuls pastry flour and whites of eggs alternately into the mixture. Have three deep cake tins well buttered and spread two-thirds of the batter in two of them. Into the remaining batter stir one ounce chocolate, melted and spread in the third plate. Bake in a moderate oven for about twenty-five minutes. Put one of the white layers on plate and spread with white icing. Put the dark cake on this one, spread with icing; on this put the third cake and spread with either white or chocolate icing.

Cake with Fruit Filling.—For the layers cream one-half pound of butter and one pound of sugar. Add six well beaten eggs, one pound and one ounce of flour, one-half pint of milk, and two even teaspoonfuls of baking powder; beat hard and bake in round jelly cake pans. For the filling boil one pound of sugar with enough water to dissolve it, until it threads. Pour slowly into the whites of four eggs, which have been beaten to a stiff froth, beating steadily all the time. When all the syrup has been consumed add one-quarter of a pound of shredded citron, one-quarter of a pound of chopped figs, one-half pound of raisins seeded and chopped fine, and Fading is caused by too hot irons. The fading of colored articles is due often not to the washing, but the ironing.

For a dresser scarf take three pretty handkerchiefs, joint them together with lace insertion, and finish with a lace ruffle.

Save old cold starch that is left over on wash day; allow it to settle, pour off water and dry, when it may be used again.

Keep an old too-brush with the stove polish to reach around behind gas knobs and into crevices where large brush won't go.

Damp hands are a great source of trouble to their owners. For a dusting powder try equal parts of starch powder and zinc powder.

Roughness round the finger nails is very unsightly. Rub the finger tips every night with some good emolument and sleep in cotton gloves.

How to avoid tipping the waiter at a restaurant:
When the bill comes, pay it exactly.

A certain involuntary expression of astonishment will be visible in the waiter's face, well-trained though it may be.

You should then rise, saying to him:

"I have made an excellent dinner; you manage the establishment much better than the preceding proprietor did."

During his rapture at being mistaken for the owner of the restaurant you escape.

There is so much room for improvement in some people that they will never be able to use it all up.

ALL SWANK!

Terrence O'Grady had been married only a week, but his bride was already making things lively in the little house in Ballybunion. He had been working for three hours in his little garden when Bridget came to the door and called out in strident tones:

"Terrence, me bhoys, come in to tay, toast, and five eggs."

Terrence dropped his spade in astonishment and ran into the kitchen.

"Shure, Bridget, allanah, ye're only coddin' me," he said.

"Bedad, Terrence, me bhoys," said Bridget, "it's not ye—it's the neighbors Oi'm coddin'!"

A Pill That is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem, they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

Dear Sirs:—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes so badly that I thought I would be disabled for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes.

Yours truly,

One of the latest prominent gentlemen to speak highly in Zam-Buk's favour is Mr. C. E. Sanford of Weston, King's Co., N.S. Mr. Sanford is a Justice of the Peace for the County, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also Deacon of the Baptist Church in Derwick. Indeed it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected. Here is his opinion of Zam-Buk. He says:—

"I never used anything that gave me such satisfaction as Zam-Buk. I had a patch of Ezeena on my ankle which had been there for over 20 years. Sometimes also the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had applied various ointments and tried all sorts of things to obtain a cure, but in vain. Zam-Buk, unlike everything else I had tried, proved highly satisfactory and cured the ailment."

"I have also used Zam-Buk for itching piles, and it has cured them completely also. I take comfort in helping my brother men, and if the publication of my opinion of the healing value of Zam-Buk will lead other sufferers to try it, I should be glad. For the relief of suffering caused by Piles or Skin Diseases I know of nothing to equal Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures ulcers, abscesses, blood poison, ringworm, fevers or running sores, bad leg, varicose ulcers, salt rheum, prairie itch, cuts, burns, bruises, baby's sores, etc. Purely herbal, 50c box, drugists and stores. Refuse imitations.

TRADE IS STILL CLIMBING STOP POISONING YOURSELF

The Rate of Increase Is Over One Hundred Millions Yearly

A despatch from Ottawa says: Canada's trade is increasing at the rate of over one hundred million dollars per year, or nearly twenty per cent. in advance of last year's high record. The figures of the Dominion trade for the first five months of the current fiscal year, issued on Friday, show a total trade of $295,817,781, an increase of $48,029,446 over the corresponding period of last year. For the month of August the trade totalled $63,187,521, an increase of $7,318,490. Imports for the five months totalled $184,602,965, a comparative increase of $41,844,972. August imports totalled $38,691,690, an increase of $5,086,335 over August of last year.

Exports of domestic products for the five months totalled $103,414,496, an increase of $6,478,571. Domestic exports for the last month totalled $22,461,918, which is a falling off of a little over a million as compared with last year.

An increase of $1,030,481 in Customs receipts for the month just ended means another increase of about eight millions in imports for the month as compared with last September.

FIGHT ON BERLIN STREET

Four Thousand Police Swept Through the Riotous Quarter.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: Fighting between the police and strikers in the Moabit quarter was resumed early on Wednesday morning. The police had cleared the fighting section late at night, but trouble broke out afresh in Restoker Street. There were no lights burning at the time and 4,000 police swept through the quarter in darkness. Many revolver shots were fired from the windows by strikers or their sympathizers. The police returned the fire and a regular fusillade followed. Over 100 policemen were injured during the fighting. The military was ordered out in force to patrol the disturbed quarter on Wednesday night. Forty rioters have been attended in various hospitals.

Thursday morning the strike district was deserted except for the foot and mounted police. There is no probability of further disturbance. The general opinion is that the disorders are now practically over. All the occupants of the Moabit district were ordered to remain indoors.

Instances of the severity of the police in handling the mob are countless. In one case a boy of sixteen years, who had no part in the trouble, but was returning to his home from confirmation, became mixed up in a crowd of rioters and one of his arms was almost lopped off by a blow from a sword. Parts of some sidewalks were covered with pools of blood. The slightest remonstrance meant being cut down. The damage done in the strike district is roughly estimated at $150,000.

ADMISSION OF CHINESE.

Grave Irregularities Discovered at Vancouver.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Department of Trade and Commerce has been advised that the investigation now in process in Vancouver into irregularities in connection with the admission of Chinese into Canada at that port has shown that a considerable number of Chinese have evaded the payment of the poll tax of $500 by presenting false certificates stating that they were merchants who were simply travelling through Canada. These certificates were purchased from Chinese officials, and though written in Chinese, contrary to the department's regulations, were apparently accepted by the Comptroller of Chinese Immigration at Vancouver. As a result of the investigation more stringent regulations and a stricter enforcement have been ordered.

Port Arthur Wagon Co. Offering of Preferred Stock.

The prospectus of the Port Arthur Wagon company, limited, appears for the first time in this issue.

The company has certainly a very strong and influential board, of which Chris. Kloefer, of Guelph, is president; D. C. Cameron, the president of the Maple Leaf Milling Company, Limited, vice-president.

In locating the factory at Port Arthur the directors have taken a wise step, as that point is nearly 1,000 miles nearer the western market than any other wagon factory in Canada. As a result the saving in freight will be very great.

Perhaps the best feature is that the company has already contracts in hand to keep them running for years with reliable firms: The John Deere Plow Company, Limited, and the Tudhope Anderson Company, Limited.

Where there are frequent attacks of Neuralgia and Headaches, there is always Constipation, Weakness of the Kidneys and Blood Poisoning.

Non-action of the bowels compels the blood to absorb foul matter which should have passed from the body.

Weak Kidneys fail to filter from the blood the necessary amount of waste.

The blood thus becomes poisoned and it is this poisoned blood which hurts the nerves and causes Neuralgia and Headaches.

"Fruit-a-tives," made from fruit juices, acts on the bowels and kidneys and is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world.

McNULTY FOUND GUILTY

Jury Returned Conviction for Murder in a Most Repulsive Case.

A despatch from Barrie says: After deliberating for over three and one-half hours on Thursday the jury in the case of Thomas McNulty, charged with inducing Mary Dolan, whom he had betrayed, to kill her offspring, brought in a verdict of murder with a strong recommendation to mercy. The girl, who was one of the chief witnesses against McNulty, had previously been found guilty of murder.

A number of dramatic incidents marked the third and closing day of the trial. McNulty's wife sat throughout the proceedings, and nodded encouragement to her husband as the Dolan woman told of the manner in which she had been pursued and finally induced to do away with her infant at the suggestion of McNulty. Fire Captain's Judgment Prevented a Panic.

A despatch from Montreal says: The presence of mind of Captain Taylor of the fire brigade alone prevented a panic at the Casino moving picture theatre here on Thursday afternoon. Taylor noticed smoke issuing from the walls of the theatre, and, after notifying the manager, went quietly out and sounded the alarm. Before the reels came clattering up the curtain was rung down, and the audience, unaware of the blaze, which was well up in the walls, dispersed quietly. The theatre was crowded with women and children, and any undue alarm must have resulted in an ugly panic. The damage was light.

Nineteen Killed in Wreck of Los Angeles Times Building.

A despatch from Los Angeles, California, says:—An attempt to destroy the residence of General Harrison Gray Otis, publisher of The Los Angeles Times, by an infernal machine was made on Saturday following an explosion which earlier in the day killed nineteen men and destroyed the buildings and plant of The Times, and a suspected effort to blow up the auxiliary plant of that paper. A powerful infernal machine was also found on Saturday in the residence of Secretary Zechandelaar of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

General Otis, who is on his way home from Mexico, and other responsible heads of The Times unequivocally charge the Times building disaster and the narrowly averted attempts at further destruction of life and property to labor union sources. The leaders of union labor repudiate the accusation, and offer all aid in their power to detect the culprits.

NEW COMPANY A GOING CONCERN.

THE PORT ARTHUR WAGON COMPANY, LIMITED, is a new Company, but will commence business under the most favorable auspices, having agreed to take over the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, of Markham, which is a going concern with a production capacity of four thousand wagons per year, and having its entire output for the ensuing year already sold. The intention is to transfer the operations of the Company to a new factory to be erected at Port Arthur.

NEW COMPANY A GOING CONCERN.

THE PORT ARTHUR WAGON COMPANY, LIMITED, is a new Company, but will commence business under the most favorable auspices, having agreed to take over the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, of Markham, which is a going concern with a production capacity of four thousand wagons per year, and having its entire output for the ensuing year already sold. The intention is to transfer the operations of the Company to a new factory to be erected at Port Arthur.

UNSURPASSED LOCATION OF PLANT.

The location of the new factory is without doubt the finest in Canada, and will be situated on the shore of Thunder Bay at Port Arthur. It is unexcelled for the assembling of materials required in manufacturing wagons and sleighs, and has a commanding position in regard to the facilities for handling its freight by rail and water, which gives the Company a great advantage over its competitors.

CONCESSIONS.

The Company has obtained valuable concessions from the City of Port Arthur, which include a grant of twenty acres of land, a 200-foot dock site, and exemption from taxation for twenty years, except local improvement and school rates. The City of Port Arthur further guarantees bonds of the Company to the extent of $100,000.00 at 5% for twenty years.

NEW FACTORY 815 MILES NEARER THE GREAT NORTHWEST MARKET.

The new factory will be fireproof, built in the most modern style, equipped with machinery embodying all the latest improvements, and thoroughly up to date in every detail, with a capacity for turning out 10,000 wagons a year. The advantages derived by the Company in locating at Port Arthur are numerous, the chief one being, perhaps, the enormous saving in freight, Port Arthur being 30 cents per 100 lbs. nearer the market than any other wagon factory in Canada. This alone gives a saving in freight of $3.50 per wagon. Coal can be delivered from the American ports to Port Arthur at a freight rate of 32½ cents per ton as compared with 90 cents per ton to Woodstock and $1.00 to Petrolia.

CONTRACTS.

This Company has a contract with the John Deere Plow Co., Limited, of Winnipeg, for supplying its total requirements of wagons and sleighs. That Company states that its requirements for the year 1911 will be 4,500 wagons and 1,300 sleighs.

The Company has a further contract with the Tudhope, Anderson Company, Ltd., of Winnipeg, to supply it with wagons for a period of five years, with a minimum average of 2,000 wagons per year and a maximum of 5,000 wagons per year.

It is well known that thousands of farmers are annually pouring into the Northwest, and it is confidently estimated that the above requirements will be more than doubled in the near future. Last year an immense number of wagons was imported into Canada and sold in the Northwest, upon which a duty of 25% was paid.

RAW MATERIALS.

This Company will be able to obtain much of its raw material in its immediate vicinity, thereby effecting a saving of many dollars in freight. With all the advantages enumerated, it is certain that within a very short time the plant will be taxed to its full extent.

MANAGEMENT.

The Company has been fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. T. H. Speight as its Manager. He has been associated with the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, for the past eighteen years, and is widely known for his integrity and business ability.

The following certificate has been prepared and certified by Messrs. Jenkins & Hardy, of Toronto, Chartered Accountants:—

H. BATEMAN FOX, ESQ.,

15½ Toronto Street,

Secretary-Treasurer Port Arthur Wagon Co., Limited:

Toronto, August 11th, 1910.

Dear Sir,—We have examined the books of The Speight Wagon Company, Ltd., at Markham, Ont., for the period December 1st, 1909, to July 31st, 1910, and certify that based upon the contract sale prices to the John Deere Plow Company, Limited, the net profit on its sales was 14%.

Yours truly,

(Sgd.) JENKINS & HARDY,
Chartered Accountants.

ESTIMATED PROFITS

It is estimated that the sales of wagons, sleighs, wagon parts and trucks for the first year will amount to $375,000. The profit of 14% upon this amount is $52,500.

No estimate has been taken of the saving in freight by reason of manufacturing point being nearer the market, and the closer proximity to points at which lumber can be more advantageously purchased and delivered than at Markham, Petrolia, Woodstock or Chatham, nor of any profits accruing to Company from rentals of dock, etc.

A further saving will also be made by the Company by reason of its freedom from all taxation (except school and local improvement taxes) for a period of twenty years.

WHY RAISE HAT?

"Why raise your hat?" is the motto of the Society for the Promotion of Greeting, whose headquarters are at Darmstadt says the London Chronicle. It is a wasteful habit, because, it wears out the hat brim. It is unhealthy because in bad weather it is apt to bring on colds. And, worst of all, it is unpatriotic for the custom when adopted from the French, the first nation in Europe to bare the head as a form of politeness. The true mode of greeting for Germans, we are told, is the military salute, which is of purely Teutonic origin, having originated among the Prussian Grenadiers. The society has gained many adherents, and the inhabitants of Darmstadt are now accustomed to see elderly civilians stand rigidly to attention and bring the hand smartly to the forehead when they meet acquaintances in the street.

The mere salute, without raising the hat, will be welcome by many of us, for when we wear the soft hat or the cloth cap we find it easy enough to pluck it off. But how to return it to its place? There is no brim—the clutch, of courtesy is stopped midway, and there is no courtier living who can take off a golf cap and return it to his head gracefully. So let us agree not to take off our hats, but merely indicate with our hands that we would take them off if we could put them on again.

They all speak of Simkins' Steel Range Cook Stove in the highest terms after trying it. If they do not I will take it away from them. It will save one cord of wood the year round, out of three cords, also one ton of coal out of three tons, and give better results. It will not cost you anything to try this stove. I will put it in your house at my risk and expense, and take it away cheerfully if you don't want it. It is entirely of new design with double damper drafts at each end of fire pot. Meetings in the interest of the cause of Temperance were held in Napanee on Sunday and Monday. On Sunday Mr. John Gibson, president of the Dominion Alliance, delivered splendid addresses in the Western Church in the morning, Trinity church in the evening and in the town hall on Sunday afternoon. On Monday evening a mass meeting was held in the town hall which was crowded, to hear the address delivered by Mr. Ben H. Spence, of Toronto. The address was forcible and highly appreciated. Mr. Spence explained fully and forcibly the working of the local option act, gave a synopsis of how the act was working in the many places which have adopted the law. During the last two years only four out of the many places under local option have repealed the act, and in a large number of places the law has been sustained by increased majorities. The meeting passed an almost unanimous motion that a by-law be submitted to the people of Napanee at the elections in January. After the meeting closed committees were formed to circulate petitions for signatures returnable on Friday, Oct. 14th. On receipt of the petitions the committee will take definite action in regard to a campaign and if a campaign is decided upon committees will be organized and arrangements made for an aggressive campaign.

The Boy Scouts

Mr. Doller has been appointed Scout-master, and under his guidance the Scout movement in the town is progressing splendidly. The Scouts, through the liberality of the citizens of Napanee, have been able to take some rooms in the Grange block, which are the head-quarters of the movement in the county. Last Monday evening ten new boys enlisted as Baden-Powell Boy Scouts. There are many more expected to enlist in the near future and a new patrol will be formed instantly. Recruits that are of a proper age will be received at any time. The scouts of the town feel proud of A. Jarvis, their old friend and playmate, who won the Canadian record for freighting by rubbing two sticks of wood together. A letter of congratulation is being sent him from the scouts of Napanee.

CRUSHING A HOTEL KEEPER.

The Beau Was Elegant In Dress and Exquisite In His Bluffing and Played His Part Well—Never Known to Pay a Bill Under Any Circumstances.

"Misery loves company," quoted Mr. Tabb, an old time Virginia gentleman, the other night. "There's a great deal of truth in that old saying.

"Some forty or fifty years ago there was a celebrated Virginia character, well known in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, whom I shall call Beau Smith, because Smith wasn't his real name. Beau Smith was not only noted for the elegance of his dress, but also for his absolute disregard of all financial obligations. He was never known to pay a bill under any circumstances.

"Beau entered the office of the old Monumental hotel, in Baltimore, one night, registered, and upon being assigned to one of the best suits of rooms in the house, for he would be satisfied only with the best, he proceeded to make himself thoroughly at home and settled down for a long stay. He ordered champagne by the case and cigars by the box for the entertainment of such friends as might visit him in his apartments and, in short, lived as though he had millions behind him. The proprietor of the hotel, Mr. Guyer, had heard of Beau, but he could not believe that he would deliberately run up such a large bill if he had no intention of paying it, and he hesitated about speaking to such an elegant gentleman about such an inelephant thing as money, but after Beau had been a guest at the Monumental for more than a month and had said nothing about paying his bill Mr. Guyer summoned up his courage and had Beau's bill made out and sent up to him. In a few moments Mr. Guyer received a polite but urgent message from Beau, asking him to come to his apartments at once.

"I sent for you, Mr. Guyer," said the inepicunious beau, "to show you a most remarkable document which has been sent up to me from your office. I don't wish to complain of your clerks, sir, but I dislike being annoyed in this way. Will you kindly look at that and tell me what it is?"

"That is a bill, Mr. Smith," said Guyer as soon as he recovered his breath.

"So I observe," responded Beau, "but, Mr. Guyer, it is made out against me."

"Certainly," replied the hotel man. "It is our account against you for board and lodging, wines, cigars and other extras for the last month, and I would be glad if you—"

"Why, my dear sir," interrupted Beau, laughing, "you surely never expected me to pay this bill?"

"I most certainly did and do expect you to pay it," answered Mr. Guyer firmly.

"But, dear sir," said Beau gently, "you knew who I was when I came to your house."

"Mr. Guyer admitted that he did.

"Then, you know," continued Beau, "that I have never been known to pay a bill to any one, and no one in his senses ever expected that I would. Now, my dear sir, I beg of you to destroy this ridiculous document and see that I am not annoyed again with

The Test of Greatness.

When Elliston went from London to his own theater at Birmingham he was known to scarcely a member of his own company. On reprising one of them simply, the irate actor threatened to kick him off the stage. He rushed to the stage manager and asked who that man was.

"Mr. A.," said the manager. "A great man, a very great man," said Elliston. "He threatened to kick me, the lessee of Drury Lane. Such a man as that must go to London. He mustn't waste his energies here." And he engaged the actor on the spot for Drury Lane.

His Method.

The little girl who was visiting at a neighbor's house had gone out to look at the horses.

"Here's one of them," she said, "that has watery eyes and coughs and hangs his head just the way papa's horse did last summer."

"What did your papa do for his horse?" asked the owner of the animals.

"He sold him," was the innocent answer.

"Romona" in "The Vulture."—Brisco Opera House, October 14th.

"Romona" the girl with the unknown power within the depths of her eyes, is a new and peculiar character to the modern stage. The power is unknown to herself and in modern times is called hypnotism. This was discovered by the philosopher and scientist, (The Vulture) in William F. Mann's newest and interesting production "The Vulture" by W. M. Fletcher. Romona whose education has been limited to the teaching of one man, shocks and startles Herbert Hackett by her innocent overture of love upon first meeting him. This supplies a very pretty comedy vein which runs all through the four acts of the play. It's a simple loving character with the Humor of Sis Hopkins and the pathos of Hilda in "The Wolf." The original cast and production will appear at the Brisco Opera House on October 14th. Prices 25c. to $1.00.

A Change.

"We must economize," she said emphatically.
"I'm so glad," his wife exclaimed.
"You take the announcement more good naturedly than usual."

"Yes; it's pleasant to hear you use the plural pronoun. Ordinarily when there is any economizing needed you expect me to do it all."

A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer:

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said, impatiently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask this gentleman what he thinks of the face."

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first-rate."

Trapping Muskrats.

Numbers of mechanical traps to catch muskrats have been invented and tried, but none gives more satisfaction than the old floating barrel trap that has been in use for many years. Both ends are left closed, and a hole about eight by twelve inches square is sawed in the side. A strong cleat is nailed across each end, the cleats projecting six or eight inches beyond the barrel, and upon the cleats are nailed two boards, one on each side of the barrel and several inches longer. Water then is placed in the barrel so that it will float with the board platforms about on a level with the surface of the pond or stream. About one-third of the barrel remains above water. Apples, carrots and other delicacies that the muskrat likes are placed in the barrel. In their attempts to get the bait the animals fall into the barrel and are unable to get out.—Exchange.

your house."

"Mr. Guyer admitted that he did. "Then, you know," continued Beau, "that I have never been known to pay a bill to any one, and no one in his senses ever expected that I would. Now, my dear sir, I beg of you to destroy this ridiculous document and see that I am not annoyed again with such foolishness."

"Do you intend to pay this bill or not?" demanded the hotel proprietor sternly.

"I do not," replied the Beau quietly. "Very well, then, I will sue you, sir."

"That is your privilege, sir." "And I will get a judgment, too," said Guyer angrily.

"You will get more than that, Mr. Guyer," responded Beau calmly. "You will get yourself laughed at by the entire country for being so foolish as to imagine that you could collect a bill from Beau Smith. Pray do not subject yourself to such ridicule."

"Guyer hesitated; he knew he would be laughed at unmercifully by every one, and, then, too, he could not help but admire the colossal cheek of Smith, so he sat down again and lit a fresh cigar.

"Mr. Smith," said he, "I'll tell you what I will do. If you will move over to the City hotel and play this same game on old man Barnum I'll give you a receipt in full for all that you owe me and say no more about it."

"Receipt the bill, Mr. Guyer," answered Smith coolly. "I had been stopping with Mr. Barnum for a month prior to coming to your house, and he also promised to give me a receipt in full for what I owed him if I would move over here and play the same trick on you."—Philadelphia Ledger.

TASMANIA.

Nicknames Applied to the One Time Convict Settlement.

"Tasmania is perhaps the most interesting of the states of our commonwealth," remarked the Australian. "It is a large triangular island lying to the south of Melbourne and was once a convict settlement.

"The climate is delightful and the soil remarkably fertile. The island is practically one large orchard, where peaches, apples, cherries, etc., are grown in sufficient quantities to keep the adjoining continent supplied, with some left over for export to England. As fruit trees do not require much tending, leisure is a notable characteristic of the inhabitants, and Tasmania is known throughout the antipodes as 'the land of lots of time' or 'the land of sleep a lot.' It is also called 'the jam country' and its natives familiarly termed 'jam eaters.' This is on account of the presence of an enormous cannery in the island, where some of the orchard products are converted into jams, jellies and preserved fruits.

"But this by no means ends the list of Tasmanian nicknames. Two Dutch explorers—Tasman and Van Diemen—had to do with the discovery of the island, and, although the name of Tasmania is now used, it is often referred to in old school books as Van Diemen's Land. We find it amusing to twist the latter name a bit and call the Tasmanians 'demons,' which is a shame, as they are the mildest and best fellows in the world. They speak of themselves as 'Tasies,' and that may be accepted as their unofficial designation."
